Thoughts on election

Voters in Carmel go to the polls Tuesday to elect three city councilmen from a field of five candidates. In an editorial, the "Pine Cone" says it finds three especially suitable contenders. Page 2.

Bleak school forecast

The fiscal future of Carmel Unified School District looks bleak, according to Superintendent Harris Taylor. He told the school board Tuesday the district will dip into the red unless cutbacks are made. Page 3.

Another water rate hike?

With one rate hike request already on file, the California-American Water Co. now says it may need an additional increase if more wells are added in Carmel Valley. Page 3.

Final vote on new laws

On Monday, the Carmel City Council will vote on two controversial ordinances. One would restrict the size of building sites in the business district; the other would create a new zoning designation aimed at encouraging construction of new dwelling units. Page 4.

Needless fire damage

In nine out of 10 structural fires in Carmel, the damage could have been minimized if the owners had installed alarms or smoke detectors. That is one of the conclusions contained in the annual report filed by the Carmel Fire Department. Page 5.

Ramps for disabled

Two citizens groups have asked City Hall to free money to build sidewalk ramps to help the aged, disabled and wheelchair-bound. Page 6.

Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, brevity is encouraged. Letters are subject to editing for length and style, but without changing the intent of the letter writer. Viewpoints on all matters are acceptable following the guidelines of good taste. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, but names may be withheld upon request.

Disliked story

Dear Editor:

Please let it be known there are indeed many Carmel youths who are genuinely interested in providing opportunities for their "forgotten" age group.

I won't pretend that I wasn't disappointed by the first in the series on "Youth in Carmel."

I am a member of the "leadership" class that was interviewed for the first article. This class deals with exactly what its name infers. The quotation marks are the reporter's personal addition.

How can I tactfully say that I feel the sentiments of my class have been grossly misrepresented? I'm not sure of the reporter's stance on the issue; he did not succeed in making this clear. But one thing I am fairly certain of is the negative attitude that is now beginning to shadow our efforts due to his article.

For the past semester, the Carmel High Student Council has been generating a lot of energy in the direction of this issue. We have yet to come up with a plausible solution, but we are far from giving up.

I feel the article has injured our drive. I write this in hopes of regenerating a positive feeling about our age group. Most of us are not conniving kleptomaniacs with a violent streak. But rather, we are people who are in need of a comfortable identity in our home town.

I was brought up to believe that to look at a problem pessimistically was to strike out before you were up to bat. I think the Carmel High ASB Council is ready to come up for a turn at bat. We don't expect an easy win, but we've a lot of spirit and enthusiasm and teamwork on our side.

I sincerely believe that a solution is close at hand. With the help of the many Carmelites of many age groups who have already devoted much energy to this cause, I think everyone can be a winner.

Petrovic praised

Dear Editor:

Our grateful thanks should go to Mr. Dusan Petrovic, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, whose recent statements regarding the effect of the proposed Marriott Hotel franchise in Carmel Valley made the issue crystal clear.

"The area where the project is planned is the most sensitive area in Monterey County."

Regarding the certification of the EIR for the 376 units of the hotel-motel complex, he said it was too "dangerous" for him to approve. And "I cannot in decency vote against the people when no letters were received justifying it, except from the developers." It would adversely affect the whole Valley and, as in the case of a shipwreck "where the lifeboats can carry only so many, if you put in more, it sinks and everybody drowns."

Valley homeowners fear that massive commercial development will multiply our rapidly growing problems and swamp the area.

The water problem is not solved. Costs for county services and taxes are mounting. The funnel-shaped Valley concentrates noise and collects smog. The noise echoes against the hillsides from commuter traffic, heavy-tonnage trucking, motorcycles, chainsaws, construction and increasing commercial plane flights. Small planes, practicing take-offs and landings, buzz over homes, school, village, gardens and add to noise pollution. Traffic is now often bumper to bumper and the main road dangerous with increasing input of cars from driveways and side roads.

The guidelines of the pending, updated Master Plan should leave no room for counter-active, profiteering pressure groups which seem to sway some elected officials.

Save KWAV

Dear Editor:

It becomes increasingly clear that one of the Peninsula's important cultural assets is in jeopardy. We refer to the probable canceling of the KWAV classical music broadcasts which may result if the license is transferred to James E. Brown.

KWAV is presently the only classical music station on the Peninsula and the broadcasts are of such uniformly high quality that, for many, evening listening has become a way of life.

A community that is thoroughly enjoying the present program and stands for its cultural and educational values cannot afford to remain inert now.

We oppose the transfer of the KWAV license to Mr. Brown and hope that others will express their disapproval.

'Bring money'

Dear Editor:

We have been very saddened and shocked after reading some of the letters that have been coming into the Pine Cone directed at a few dedicated Carmel residents who happen to remember what the Carmel spirit has stood for over the years.

The small residential village never anticipated it would nurture pollution, congestion and a "Coney Island" atmosphere.

All places grow, but with what we started with, why the angry vitriolic abuse toward those few who happen to remember the essence and spirit of Carmel-by-the-Sea?

How much good can be accomplished by these unfair tactics? Will we bring more unity? Do really want to save a little of what is left of this beautiful spot, or do we want to hang a large sign on Ocean Avenue that reads: "Bring Your Money."

No review

Dear Editor:

Why should the Pine Cone be Carmel's "official" newspaper? On Feb. 17, I attended a very fine performance of The Homecoming by Harold Pinter at Carmel's Sunset Theater. The play was very intriguing and entertaining, but the interpretation was quite unusual for a Pinter play.

My friends and I discussed the production until well past midnight, but were unable to reach a consensus opinion. Two members of my party know Barbara Mountrey and saw her there opening night. We all looked forward to comparing our opinions with those of an expert.

However, when I received my Pine Cone, I found no review. Why? Perhaps you feel that the first local dramatic (not comic) production on the Sunset stage in over five years is unimportant? The Seaside, Monterey and Pacific Grove papers did not — they reviewed it.

Perhaps you feel that an out-of-town company playing in Pebble Beach is more important than a local theater group trying to get started in Carmel and using Carmel facilities? You must, for you reviewed Susannah and not The Homecoming.

Or is the real reason more insidious? Is it because the Western Opera troupe advertised in the Pine Cone and the Reunion Performance Group did not?

At the polls, good sense is the most potent force

By AL EISNER

IT MUST be confusing and frustrating for the Carmel voters who are planning to go to the polls Tuesday to elect three members to the City Council.

Many are sympathetic with the views of some of the candidates who proclaim that they are the protectors of the interests of the residents of the city and wish to "stem the tide of commercialism." Yet, the voter is uneasy about the bitterness and division expressed in the verbal combat on the Planning Commission and the City Council.

Opinion

What to do? Who to vote for? How can one figure out which candidates are best qualified to serve the city?

Alert readers may have been able to make up their minds by reading the Pine Cone these past several months, as the campaign heated up. Our blow-by-blow coverage of council and commission meetings shed some light. The scores of letters to the editor and opinion pieces we published might have helped.

The biggest bonanza to the undecided voter, however, is in this edition of the Pine Cone. Starting on page 21, you will find in-depth interviews with the five candidates. We tried to cover all the major issues and attempted to prevent any candidate from ducking questions. We were not always successful, but the interviews make fascinating reading.

Another measure on the ballot is the question of whether our mayor ought to be elected directly by the people or by his fellow councilmen. You'll find an article examining the pros and cons in this edition also.

RETAINING one's perspective, with all of the alarms being sounded by candidates and by pressure groups, is not easy. Two important factors ought to be borne in mind:

First: Carmel will survive as one of the most beautiful places on earth regardless of which candidates are elected; and Second: The real problem is virtually insoluble. The escalation of rents in the business district has forced out many resident-oriented businesses. This is a function of the free enterprise system, and while the process is not irreversible, it is very difficult to deal with by legislation. It must be handled with mutual trust and understanding. I'll explain both points.

Have you heard any candidate dare to suggest that we construct anything on our prized city-owned beach? Has anyone proposed that we build any high-rises in the commercial district? Has any candidate dared to propose that we allow the intrusion of commercialism into the residential district? Who has the audacity to suggest that we allow neon signs or assign street numbers to our houses?

Who would deny that Carmel is still one of the jewels in Nature's crown? Should we be mean enough to deny it to the thousands of visitors who thirst for the serenity and beauty of its charms?

It ought to be borne in mind that most of the folks who come here from out of town are still awed by the great natural beauty of Carmel. For those of us who remember Carmel "as it used to be," it is still a haven if you have ventured to travel elsewhere.

So, regardless of which candidates are elected, Carmel will survive. The congestion in the business district on weekends does not often spill over into the residential district, except for the unfortunate property owners who have to contend with cars parked by unlucky employees of business who have not been provided with a place to park in the commercial district.

HOW CAN we come to grips with the problem of high rents in the commercial district?

We know many property owners who could easily lease their properties for two or three times the rents they are getting. On the other hand, several key properties, handled by bank trusts, have been leased by businesses able to afford the higher rent schedule demanded by the owners or trustees. But, how can this be stopped?

The flight of locally oriented business to areas outside Carmel is not due, primarily, to higher rents . . . it's the availability of parking. With all the controversy raging over "residents vs. business," has anyone come forward with a plan to provide off-street parking for local

Company executive says

Cal-Am may double-dip for water rate hikes

By KEN PETERSON

THE CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Co. will follow up its latest request for a user surcharge with a rate hike request if the company gets permission to drill four new wells in the lower Carmel Valley and build another iron removal plant to purify the water they pump.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency gave its conditional endorsement to the new wells and treatment plant on Feb. 22. The Cal-Am board of directors will consider the proposal when it meets next week.

Final authorization of the project would have to come from the state Public Utilities Commission.

Richard T. Sullivan, vice president and general manager of Cal-Am, said Monday the second rate hike would be needed. He said the new iron plant and wells could cost about $2.6 million, based on preliminary estimates.

Cal-Am filed Friday with the PUC to hike rates enough to boost the company revenue by 12.5 per cent. The firm is authorized to make a 9.2 per cent profit, but it claims the costs of new water treatment facilities have reduced its profits.

The pending rate increase actually is a surcharge and it would boost revenues by $482,600 a year. The present Cal-Am revenue is $3.87 million. The surcharge would be levied against those who use more than 600 cubic feet during the customary two-month billing period. Users would pay 8.3 cents for each additional 100 cubic feet used above the 600-cubic-foot level, according to Sullivan.

Construction of the Rancho Canada de la Segunda pipeline, the Begonia Iron Removal plant and the three new Carmel Valley wells cost Cal-Am $3.4 million last year, Sullivan said. The projects were mandated by the PUC to increase water available for district customers and to improve water quality, he said.

Construction of an additional iron removal plant would be more costly because there is "more iron and manganese in the water at the lower end of the Valley," Sullivan said. The plant would have to be larger to handle the load, he added.

While he would not speculate on how much additional revenue the company would need if it undertakes the project, Sullivan did say Cal-Am would need "a new rate increase and adjustment."

The move to drill four additional wells in the lower Carmel Valley stems, in part, from findings issued in December by the state Water Resources Department. After examining how much water was believed to be in the river aquifer and finding the amount had increased since the last study in 1974, the department concluded additional wells could be safely dug in the lower Valley.

In its report, the state department said the 1978 water needs for the Peninsula could not be met unless new wells were added. The statement, however, was based on the drought conditions that existed then and the fact Cal-Am customers had severely cut back on their consumption because of mandatory water rationing.

SULLIVAN SAID HE hopes the company could get approval for the additional iron plant and well project in time to finish the work by the spring of 1979. The second rate increase request would come shortly before the completion date, since the company cannot get a rate hike based on money that is not spent or on facilities not in service.

The present rate hike on file is being asked based on an April 1 starting date for the Canada pipeline and Begonia iron removal plant, Sullivan said. The increase is being asked now to compensate for "regulatory lag time" in approving the boost, Sullivan said.

The company's last major increase in the general metered service rates came in September 1976. Last year, Cal-Am was granted electric power offset increases of 4.7 per cent and 2 per cent by the PUC because of higher utility costs.

A one-year surcharge, scheduled to end in April, was granted to Cal-Am by the PUC for water conservation programs during 1976. It was assessed based on meter size and amounted to $1.20 for the year on the 5/8-inch by 3/4-inch meters used by 80 per cent of Cal-Am customers.

An eight-month surcharge of 29 cents per 100 cubic feet used over the 600-cubic-foot bimonthly minimum also was granted last year. It ends in July and was designed to make up for the drop in revenue caused by mandatory water rationing.

Cal-Am's new construction proposal came before the Peninsula Water Management Agency for advisory comment last week, according to Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel, chairman of the agency.

The board voted endorsement of the four additional wells and iron plant, with two conditions:

- That the PUC require Cal-Am to reveal all of its existing water commitments before it allows new water hookups in the company service area; and,
- That Cal-Am assure that drilling the wells will not imperil riparian vegetation by lowering the Carmel Valley water table so trees will be unable to reach water.

The water commitment study also is being urged by Farr in his role as a county supervisor. The supervisors are scheduled to vote March 14 on sending a letter to the PUC containing that request.

The supervisors also have authorized a study of the effect well drilling has had on vegetation along the banks of the Carmel River. The $10,000 study is scheduled to begin this spring and will analyze what is causing the vegetation to die and who would pay for preserving the plants as bank protection.

'Mad Hatter' thief strikes

Chris Axelson knows only one thing is worse than a cowboy without a horse — that's a cowboy without his hat.

The resident Carmel blacksmith told police someone swiped two gray cowboy hats from his pickup truck Monday. It was parked outside his home on the east side of Torres near Eighth. The two hats, valued at $80, were "nearly new," Axelson told police.

Bleak fiscal news given to trustees of Carmel schools

THE HARD choices imposed by new school finance laws were driven home to the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees Tuesday when Superintendent Harris Taylor presented a three-year budget projection that showed the district will be in the red by 1981 unless all employee salaries are frozen at their current levels.

Yet even the freeze would leave the district with only $60,000 in its general reserve fund at the end of the 1980-81 school year, well below the $190,000 figure recommended by Taylor.

Freeze on pay raises is proposed

To provide that financial cushion — which represents 3 per cent of the projected 1980 budget — Taylor said the trustees would have to cut $50,000 from the budget each year. The amount is equal to the salary and benefits paid to any three district employees.

The staffing cuts would be in addition to the already planned elimination of five teaching positions in the preliminary 1978-79 budget presented Tuesday.

Any salary increases for district employees would cost about $45,000 for each 1 per cent raise, Taylor told the trustees. Offering any raise would require further cutbacks, he said.

"I'm not trying to sell you anything," Taylor told the board. "I'm just pointing out the mathematics of the situation."

ASSISTANT Superintendent for Business Walter Hinton said in his written statement, which accompanied the projections, that only new and more favorable legislation can help the district in coming years.

"The only hope for relief we can see is that the Carmel Unified School District is in better financial condition than many other basic aid districts," he wrote. "Perhaps the legislature will recognize the problems created by recent legislation when some of the so-called wealthy districts go bankrupt or cut programs to the point they are no longer providing adequate education."

The preliminary budget presented to trustees projected income of $6.78 million and a tax rate of $1.872, down 6.9 cents from the current year.

The drop is attributed to an anticipated assessed valuation hike of 9.6 per cent in 1979, conservatively lower than the double-digit increases over the past six years.

Should assessments rise more than 9.6 per cent, the tax rate could be lower, Hinton said.

Assessed valuation rose by 14.8 per cent last year and by 23.9 per cent in 1976-77.

Hinton pointed out to trustees that the tax rate would have dropped another 7.7 cents except that the district must export $205,000 for distribution to

Water expert's blueprint for a Carmel River dam

By EDWIN B. LEE

MY VIEWS on providing flows from a dam to preserve the steelhead fishery, as discussed in the Feb. 16 edition of the Pine Cone, need clarification.

I wholeheartedly endorse the proposal to divert water stored in the dam into the water mains near the mouth of the Carmel River. The year-round flows so provided would benefit not only the steelhead, but the human inhabitants and the riparian vegetation in the lower Carmel Valley. I also support the request from the State Fish and Game Department to provide additional downstream flows for steelhead spawning migrations, for the fishermen during the steelhead season, and for carrying the fish back to the ocean at the times and in the amounts prescribed by the Fish and Game Department. But, I support the latter only to the extent that the prescribed flows are available as input to the dam reservoir at the times the releases are requested. Having the river flows bypass the dam for the benefit of the fish and the fishermen is not unreasonable.

However, providing storage to guarantee the prescribed fish releases, whether or not the natural flow of the river would provide such flows, is unreasonable as a mitigation measure.

The 38,000 acre-feet storage proposed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to provide a firm yield of from 22,000 to 27,000 acre-feet for fish flow releases would raise the cost of a small dam astronomically. Such storage is nearly twice as great as the storage capacity I propose for human water supply. I don't believe the taxpayers or water consumers will be willing to pay for it with the consequence that we will have no new dam at all.

If no dam is built and the future needs of the Peninsula are met solely by extracting more water from the Carmel Valley aquifer, the future of the steelhead fishery is bleak. As I pointed out in the PUC hearings in 1974, if the extractions projected by the State Department of Water Resources come to pass, the historical record indicates that the spill from existing dams would be inadequate to recharge the aquifer every two or three years. In those years, with most of the flow being absorbed in the river bed, a successful spawning run would be unlikely. Inclusion of runoff from below the dams decreases that frequency to every three or four years.

A MORE damaging effect on the steelhead has not been previously discussed. It frequently happens that a brief storm will provide sufficient flow to lure steelhead from the ocean into the river and to carry fingerlings downstream. The flow may then decrease to only a few hundred feet per second. In the past, the migrating fish would simply lie in the deeper holes awaiting the next rain to proceed on their journey. In the future, those minor flows will be absorbed by the river bottom until the aquifer has filled. The holes will become dry, leaving the fish to die. The future of the steelhead in the Carmel River without a dam is not promising.

The critical factor in whether or not we are able to build a larger dam on the Carmel River is whether the taxpayers and water customers will underwrite the cost and partially pay for it. My own proposal, which I think is most likely to encourage them to do that, is as follows:

- Construct a larger dam at the San Clemente site with a storage capacity equal to the firm yield of the watershed upstream. This would be about 20,000 acre-feet and would, according to present estimates, cost between $40 million and $50 million. The precise cost must await the engineering design and construction bids.
- Release water from that dam to be diverted into the water mains in the lower Carmel Valley, thus providing a year-round flow in the river.
- Provide for fish releases as prescribed by the Fish and Game Department, but not to exceed the natural flow of the river above the dam at the time of the releases.
- Provide no frills such as additional storage for flood control or guaranteed fish flow releases.
- Provide financing such that the major portion of the cost of the dam would be borne by new customers and-or those who would directly benefit financially from the arrival of the new residents. This could be accomplished by means of a hookup charge not to exceed an average of $6,000 per new family. (Assume, for example, that a $50 million dam were financed with a 40-year general obligation bond at 6 per cent, a $6,000 hookup charge were imposed and a 1.5 per cent population growth rate were experienced. The average cost per existing customer would be about $20 per year the first year and would decline to nothing in 15 years.)
- Develop new wells in the lower Carmel Valley aquifer to provide the additional 5,000 acre-feet per year the PUC has stated is available.
- Mitigate the erosion and other damage caused by exporting water from Carmel Valley by irrigating along the river.

The supplemental 16,000 acre-feet would provide for the domestic water supply requirements for nearly 50 years at a 1.5 per cent growth rate. This could happen.

Those who argue for increasing the cost of a dam by adding superfluous storage or for delaying initiation while these and other similar issues are debated are, in effect, arguing for no dam. With construction costs rising at an estimated $1 million per month, further delays or exorbitant demands will lead to but one conclusion. We can't afford it.

(Editor's note: Edwin B. Lee is a member of the Zone 11 Water Advisory Board. Last month, the advisory board voted on a motion from Lee that urged construction of a new dam on the Carmel River. He lives in Carmel.)

Controversial issues face council Monday

TWO controversial city ordinances come up for second readings Monday at 8 p.m. when the Carmel City Council meets at City Hall.

One ordinance would establish the first new residential zoning category in Carmel since 1929. The other would limit commercial building site size in the commercial district to 8,000 square feet. Both must be passed Monday to become law.

The proposed R-4 residential zone would permit single-family dwellings, apartments and condominiums, and conditionally allow 25 types of businesses that ostensibly serve residents. These businesses, however, would have to obtain use permits.

No specific area has been designated for R-4 zoning, but the intent appears to be to apply it to the current C-2 limited commercial district on Junipero Avenue between Third and Sixth Avenues.

Backers of the new zoning category claim it will foster new multi-unit and low-cost housing for Carmel. Opponents say it is hastily conceived and would not result in more housing.

THE BUILDING site size ordinance in the C-1-C commercial district would reduce the current limit from 16,000 square feet to 8,000 square feet.

Supporters claim the ordinance will prohibit future large structures in Carmel such as the Carmel Plaza. Opponents insist it will foster more building density and less open space. Eleven blocks in the central commercial district would be affected. The average building site size in the C-1-C district is 5,035 square feet.

Other agenda items scheduled for Monday include:

- Invitation of bids for the construction of a pedestrian bridge at Mission Trail Park (formerly Flanders-Doolittle Park).
- A report from City Administrator Jack Collins regarding the status of the Local Coastal Work Program.
- Consideration of architectural changes to the north courtyard at Sunset Center.
- Consideration of a request by Postmaster Frank Ledesma to install three park benches outside the post office.
- Consideration of the Forest Theatre Guild contract for 1978.
- Second reading of an ordinance granting the city administrator the powers to appoint a city clerk.
- First reading of an ordinance to establish an effective date for the 55-cent garbage collection rate hike.
- Consideration of a resolution of appreciation for Ralph Cowen, former city finance officer. Cowen held the post for two years before resigning. Douglas D. Peterson, 27, a former assistant finance director from Salem, Ore., assumed Cowen's duties on Feb. 1.

Needless damage in Carmel structure fires, department report says

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

STRUCTURAL DAMAGE at nine out of 10 fires in Carmel last year could have been minimized if the premises had fire alarms or smoke detectors, Assistant Carmel Fire Chief Vern Allred said in the annual department report filed in February.

There were 37 structure fires in 1977 and at all but four, damage was reported. The total property loss due to fire was $325,013 in 1977, according to the report. The figure, however, included vehicle fires.

Future losses could diminish because the city building code was revised last year and it now requires smoke detectors in new houses and sprinkler systems in new businesses.

Smoke detectors also are required in homes that are remodeled and in businesses where remodeling costs are less than 25 per cent of the value of the property. Sprinkler systems are mandatory in a new business or commercial property remodeled at cost exceeding 25 per cent of its value, according to Ron Warren, a city building inspector.

The Carmel Fire Department answered a record 1,170 emergency calls in 1977, 98 more than last year, according to the annual department report.

These calls included 695 medical emergencies and 475 fire-related calls. Only 54 of the fire calls involved property loss. No serious injuries were reported. Fire and medical emergency calls have steadily increased for the past 10 years, according to Robert Updike, the chief of the volunteer fire department.

Fire alarms received totaled 235, including 114 residential, 81 commercial and 40 vehicular fires. Fires where losses were suffered broke down 25 residential, 12 commercial and 17 vehicular. Man-hours spent included 5,081 on fire calls and 6,097 on ambulance calls.

WATER DAMAGE from firefighting efforts ranked as the highest single cause of damage last year. Other causes most frequently cited were flammable liquid on engines, electrical shorts, unattended stoves and defective fireplaces and floor furnaces.

An ordinance prohibiting installation of new floor furnaces took effect here in December. The fire department had pushed for a tough law that also would have outlawed floor furnaces now in use.

The drought had little effect on firefighting operations last year, according to Updike. "We lucked out," he said. None of the reported fires in 1977 were linked to the drought, Updike said.

But the drought hampered firefighting drills last year, which were performed without water, according to a report to the fire chief from Bill Hill, a fire captain.

The dry drills "could affect firefighters' knowledge of the use of firefighting equipment," Updike said. With the drought at an end, the department will soon return to water drills, the chief said. The drills usually are conducted at Carmel Beach.

The ban on burning, in effect because of the water shortage, sharply reduced the number of burning complaints, according to a memorandum to the chief sent by Allred and included in the annual report.

Since the ban was lifted Jan. 12, 17 burning permits have been issued. Permits exceeded 150 in 1976, according to the chief.

The department issues permits for December through March. The permits apply only to yard trimmings. Trash or garbage may not be burned, the chief said.

As a precaution and at the request of the fire department, the city bulldozed a firetrail along the perimeter of Mission Trail park in October 1977.

"Our major concern was how we would get firefighting equipment in and out of there if a fire started during the drought," Updike explained. The dirt road left temporary scars on the park land. Nearby residents voiced disapproval at an October City Council meeting.

The largest fire loss last year was $104,286, from a general alarm fire March 10, on the west side of Camino Del Monte between Second and Third. Twenty-six men spent five hours and 36 minutes fighting the blaze. A lit cigarette had been left on a stuffed chair. The property was insured.

To aid at crosswalks

Citizens groups ask city to build ramps for aged

CURBSIDE ramps to aid the aged and disabled should be installed at crosswalks along Ocean Avenue and other heavily trafficked areas in the Carmel business district, two citizens' groups have told the Carmel City Council.

In a letter sent to City Administrator Jack Collins and timed to reach the councilmen before their June budget deliberations, leaders of Old Carmel and the Carmel Citizens Committee urged the City Council to make a special appropriation for construction of the ramps.

"The purpose of these ramps is a matter of both safety and convenience to elderly or disabled persons who have difficulty in walking. Persons in wheelchairs would also benefit," the letter said. It was signed by Arthur Strasburger Jr., president of Old Carmel, and William G. Doolittle, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee.

Existing city ordinances that require ramps only for new sidewalk construction are insufficient, the letter said. "The program should cover that portion of the business district most frequently used by pedestrians," it stated.

If funds are approved, the ramps probably would be placed at street corners along Ocean Avenue, between Junipero and Monte Verde, Collins said.

The State Department of Rehabilitation recommends two ramps at each corner; one ramp adjacent to the beginning of each curb return. Along the Ocean Avenue stretch recommended by Collins, that would mean 48 ramps.

CARMEL already has about 12 ramps for the handicapped, according to Bill Askew, the city public works superintendent.

Various federal and state laws now require ramps with new construction or remodeling. The Uniform City Building Code, adopted in 1976 by Carmel, also requires access for the handicapped when a new building is erected or an old one remodeled, said Ron Warren, a city building inspector. The 1970 California Health and Safety Code has similar requirements, according to John Littlefield, of the Department of Rehabilitation.

Despite the requirements, there are no state funds available to underwrite ramp construction, Littlefield said.

Monterey and Pacific Grove installed ramps even before the state requirements were enacted, according to officials from both cities. The local share of gasoline tax money can be used to pay for public works like ramping, they said. Ramping a single concrete curb can cost up to $400, unless the city does the work itself, estimated Leo McIntyre, a Monterey city engineer.

CARMEL can install its own ramps, according to Askew. "How many we could do at once would depend on the work load and the time of year," he said. His crews installed the existing ramps in the business district.

City officials in Monterey and Pacific Grove applaud the goals of ramping, but they cited various problems ramps can present.

Even a small bump between the sidewalk and the lip of the curb can catch wheelchair tires, McIntyre said.

The blind must know where the ramps are located, said Robert Feeney, a city engineer in Pacific Grove. He recommended putting a rough texture on sidewalk approaches to the ramps.

A damage claim has been filed against the city of Pacific Grove by an elderly woman who is partially blind and tripped on a ramp, according to Pacific Grove City Manager Bill Pitt.

No claims have been filed against Carmel stemming from ramped curb crossings by the disabled or elderly, according to Collins.

Carmel trio advances in B of A competition

Three Carmel High School seniors have been chosen to advance to zone competition in the 1978 Bank of America Achievement Awards program, Principal Dan Stevenson has announced.

The students and their fields of study are:

- Jess Taylor, son of Elaine Taylor of Carmel Valley, science and mathematics.
- Theresa Thomas, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Donald A. Thomas of Carmel, liberal arts.
- Donna Ryu, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ryu of Carmel Valley, fine arts.

Eleven other seniors received certificates of merit for superior performance in their study fields. They were Barbara Green, art; Linda Shook, drama; Elizabeth Copsey, music; Chrostopher Paik, English; Jill Ricketts, foreign language; James Irwin, social studies; Tina Wald, laboratory science; Steven Heinz, mathematics; Janice McGuckin, business; Michelle March, home economics; and Clinton Wilson, trades and industrial.

The three winning seniors, who each receive a personally engraved plaque, will compete March 28 with students from neighboring high schools. Judging at this zone event will be conducted by a panel of educators and business and community leaders, and will be based on written compositions, group discussions, scholarship and civic and school activities.

First-place winners in this event then advance to the regional finals. Second- and third-place zone winners in each field receive $100 and $75, respectively.

In the finals, zone winners will compete for top prizes of $1,000, $750 and $500. All other finalists receive $250.

Surfing honors for son of Sam Colburn

Surfing and art history may not sound like compatible interests, but for former Carmel resident Bolton Colburn, the two go together perfectly.

Colburn, 22, will graduate with an art history major from UC San Diego in June. His father, Carmel artist Samuel B. Colburn, believes he may go into museum work after college.

In the meantime, however, he is busy winning some of the major amateur surfing titles in the United States. In recent months, he has won the national intercollegiate title and has taken top honors in American Surfing Association competitions, both nationally and in the California division.

Bolton may soon be traveling to Hawaii and possibly Brazil for competitions because of his success in mainland tournaments, according to his father. He has been an active surfer for the past eight years, spending at least two or three hours a day on the curls. He moved to San Diego with his mother, Grace Carolyn Meredith, after attending Carmel elementary and middle schools. He graduated from high school in the San Diego area.

Bolton is not the only surfer in the family. His younger brother, Cyrus, also surfs, but is more interested in photographing the sport, according to his father.

Mrs. Petren wins DLI honor

A Carmel resident and civilian employee of the Defense Language Institute in Monterey has been given two awards by the institute for her work there.

Helen V. Petren was honored with Outstanding and Quality Step Increase awards in ceremonies recently at the Presidio of Monterey.

An employee in the Russian Department of the institute, she was one of 16 civilian workers honored.

Gloomy school finance news

California districts with lower assessed valuations under provisions of AB 65, the new school financing law. The law was passed in 1977 to carry out court-ordered redistribution of state aid.

The budget includes normal salary schedule pay increases, but no cost-of-living salary hikes. Taylor asked trustees to give district administrators "the first look at budget cuts."

"We want to review all aides employed to see how essential they are," he said. "Everything we cut is going to hurt. I don't know what other alternative we have, unless somebody can manufacture some money."

Taylor pointed out that 85 per cent of the budget goes for salaries and benefits.

"It's axiomatic that when you talk about cuts, you talk about staff reductions," he said.

HINTON told the board that there are "none of the goodies" in the preliminary budget that have been included in past years — capital improvements at district schools which could not be funded through the campus budgets.

He also noted that the district faces rising insurance premiums and also must carry additional insurance because inflation is boosting the replacement cost of existing buildings. Utility rates will also increase, Hinton said.

The preliminary budget allocates $3.5 million for certificated employee salaries, up less than $1,000 from the current year because of a cut of 5.5 teaching posts. Classified employee salaries would rise by $5,000, to $1,129,892.

Enrollment, now at 3,415 pupils, is projected to dip to 3,303 next year and to 3,053 by 1980.

Trustees had no comments on the budget and will review it at a later date. Adoption of a final budget will come in the first week of August.

In reviewing the budget projections for the next three years, Taylor noted that the first three-year projection had been accurate for 1977-78 "within $4,000 to $5,000.

"I'm happy our projection has held up," he said. "I'm unhappy because I would like to have made an error indicating more money is available."

FISCAL scenarios drawn up by Hinton projected the budget into 1980-81 figuring a 9.6 per cent annual property assessment increase and with four different salary figures: a 3 per cent raise each of the three years; a 3 per cent raise for 1978-79 only; a 2 per cent raise for 1978-79 only; and no raise in any of the three years.

The projections ranged from a budget deficit of $755,440 in 1980-81 if the 3 per cent raise were granted each year to a reserve surplus of $18,966 if there were no raises granted.

Hinton said the district would actually have $40,000 more because of belt-tightening measures being taken this year to keep spending below the amount budgeted.

Tax rates were not projected for 1979-80 or 1980-81. District tax rates have dropped annually since the $2.847 per $100 rate of 1972-73. The district is taxing to its maximum capacity without going to the voters for an override election, however.

The projections also do not estimate how much will have to be levied for export to other state school districts beyond the 7.7 cent tax in 1978-79.

"It's easy to say at this point there will be no salary increases for the next three years when the cost of living increased 0.8 per cent in the last month," Taylor said. "But over three years, the teaching staff would have a loss of purchasing power of 21 per cent."

"The question is how in this period do we offer some kind of salary increase if the cost of living goes up as expected," he added. "If the staff would agree to no salary increase for three years, your problem would be easy.

"In order to grant salary increases now and in the future, reductions must be made in the number of support personnel and teaching staff," he said.

More bad news — the Jarvis Initiative

As if the gloomy budget projections for Carmel schools were not bad enough, Superintendent Harris Taylor gave trustees his analysis Tuesday of what the effects of Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Limit Initiative, would be on district programs.

The district could spend at normal levels and hope the legislature provides reimbursement before all the money runs out, Taylor said. The other way to make up for an anticipated $2.57 million revenue loss would be to cut back on staff and programs. The cuts he outlined were:

• Cut the total staff by 119 persons, including 49 classroom teachers.

• Close Carmelo and Woods schools.

• Eliminate all extra-curricular activities, including athletics.

• Increase class sizes by seven pupils per class.

• Cut the budget reserve to $95,000.

• Reduce pupil transportation to four bus routes.

• Eliminate the Regional Occupation Program, the Adult School and Community Services Programs.

• Eliminate all librarians, elementary school music teachers and vice principals, cut three counselors, 10 central office staff members including one administrator and the school nurse.

• Cut all supplies and equipment by 50 per cent or more.

• Cut 21.6 other positions from maintenance, secretarial and special education staffs.

"Unless the state passes legislation to allow school districts to reduce staff after the March 1 deadline for notification of dismissal, the district is committed to maintaining the current staff for the 1978-79 school year," Taylor told trustees. "This would require the district to operate until all available funds are expended, then close the school until new monies are delivered by the state."

The only comment came from Trustee Frances R. Gaver.

"It boggles the mind," she said.

Election editorial

residents who wish to shop downtown? Heck no. And I'll tell you why: It's because of the prevailing feeling among the "resident-oriented" members of the council that creating more parking places would only attract more people and more congestion.

When Carmel was conceived 60 or 70 years ago, there was no provision for the accommodation of the motor car. Our stores cannot accept deliveries from back alleys because they don't have any. We don't have large parking lots downtown because when the business district was designed before World War I, the planners could not envision the problems caused by the intrusion of automobiles.

As long as our residents, merchants, visitors and employees of businesses choose to get here by automobile, we're going to have a parking problem . . . and locally oriented business might have to leave because it is simply too expensive to try to provide the needed parking.

The existing majority on the City Council has attempted to deal with this situation by punishing and penalizing businessmen — while they claim to be protecting the interests of the residents.

In short, they are not as much "pro resident" as they are anti-business.

I won't attempt to explain here how this has come about. You might be able to pick up some of the background by reading the interviews with the candidates in this issue.

How do we build an atmosphere of trust and understanding with the landlords and property owners in Carmel? Certainly not by attempting to enact laws that would devalue property without extending normal courtesies to the property owner. When you set up an adversary situation, you can predict that the outcome will be controversial and lead to bitterness.

The present majority on the City Council has attempted to legislate without soliciting the goodwill or participation of property owners in Carmel. As a consequence, many owners of property in the business district have adopted a "to hell with it" attitude and are trying to extract the last dollar's worth of income from their property.

What is needed is new blood that understands and appreciates the balance that is required between the public welfare and the need (or desire) of a property owner to derive a decent return on his investment.

IN CASE you thought we were going to duck the question . . . well, we feel that the campaign has generated plenty of heat and little light, so we'll try to give you some guidance on how to vote.

The contest for the two-year seat on the council presents a very clear and obvious choice. Dr. Francis Herrick, former president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, is the clear choice. The incumbent, Helen Arnold, cannot match his wisdom or his experience in dealing with Carmel's problems. As a former president of the Carmel Citizens Committee and a constant observer of City Council and Planning Commission meetings for many years, Dr. Herrick, a Rhodes scholar and former professor of history at Mills College is an ideal candidate. He has shown an independence of spirit and clarity of vision that will be an asset to Carmel. A long-time resident, Dr. Herrick's articulate and moderate voice will be most welcome.

Three candidates are vying for the two four-year seats on the council. Dorothea Roberts, a 12-year veteran of the Planning Commission, would bring badly needed practical experience to the city's ruling body. A 55-year resident of Carmel, Dorothea is an artist and a successful businesswoman — the embodiment of the Carmel ideal.

Businessman Howard Brunn does not have an extensive background in civic affairs, but would bring valuable balance to the council. He is supported by Old Carmel, the group that is fighting to protect the interests of the residents of Carmel. The same lobby supports incumbent Mike Brown, an energetic young man who has labored mightily for Carmel, but who has been less than effective in devising and enacting laws that would protect the future of Carmel.

AN INTERESTING phenomenon in this election year is the emergence of a political party in Carmel. The pressure group that calls itself "Old Carmel" was originally formed to "save" the Village Corner restaurant. Since that time, it has lobbied on behalf of the residents of Carmel, but with a voice that is sometimes shrill and unattractive. It supports the Norberg majority on the City Council.

I think it is presumptuous for this group to call itself "the most powerful political force in the history of Carmel" as it did in a recent newsletter.

The most powerful political force in Carmel is the good sense of its residents. Provided with enough information, we are sure they will make the decision that is best for our village next Tuesday.

Fire Calls

Feb. 24

Mutual aid call at 4:57 to aid in fire extinguishment at Cannery Row. Firemen were dispatched to the fire scene from the headquarters fire station in Monterey at 351 Madison. Some 23 Carmel firemen responded, logging 117 man-hours until the fire was extinguished. The fire, which caused more than $2 million damage to 15 businesses, was determined to have been caused by arson.

Feb. 25

First aid given at 3:58 p.m. to Candace Fletcher, 24, at Second and Torres. She was treated for a possible fractured jaw and taken to Community Hospital.

Feb. 26

Medical emergency at 6:22 p.m. for Beatrice Picard, at 12th and Casanova. she was taken to Community Hospital.

Feb. 27

Medical emergency at 1 a.m. for Karim Sadeghi, 18, on Peter Pan Road in the Carmel Highlands. She was treated for dizziness and taken to Community Hospital.

Medical emergency at 2:30 p.m. for Paul Norby, 57, at the Carmel Police Station at Junipero and Fourth. He was treated for a laceration over his right eye and taken to Community Hospital.

Medical emergency at 5:06 p.m. for Dennis Brokaw, at Torres and Sixth. He was taken to Community Hospital.

Youth idleness: Many 'small a

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THERE IS no one single solution to the problem of teen idleness in Carmel. But there seem to be several "small answers" that could give youngsters more to do and a feeling of self-worth.

One obvious answer is a job. One out of six jobs on the Peninsula suitable for those in the 16-to-18 age group can be found in Carmel, according to a student employment service in Monterey. One 16-year-old from Carmel High School interviewed for this series said he found three jobs in one week.

But he did it for a lark. "I didn't really want the jobs. I just wanted to see if I could get them," he said.

Although the teenagers interviewed had definite ideas about what they would want for amusements — a skateboard park was mentioned most frequently — as a group, they are disorganized and have little influence on key decision makers.

That could be the reason there are no rock concerts here, for instance. The city-owned Sunset Center Theater stages several classical music performances, but there is a de facto ban on rock 'n' roll. "This is a concert hall, not a rock hall," the director of the center said. The director, Richard Tyler, characterized rock music crowds as too animated and messy to justify renting the theater for rock concerts.

If a deck is stacked against the youth, however, the adult community cannot be given all the blame. Many of the teens themselves are not motivated to effect change, although they express a desire to do so.

"After school, I go home and watch television. On weekends, I just try to find something to do."

A 17-year-old Carmel High School senior says that is how he spends his spare time.

"We moved to Carmel because it was described in the Chicago Sun-Times as one of the six best places to live in the nation," says another.

This youth moved here three years ago. He says he was a "dope addict" during the five years he spent in Chicago. "Since I moved here, I only get high off sunsets," he says.

But what works for him does not work for others. One student remarked, "That's great, but what does that guy do on cloudy days?"

THE ONLY youth-oriented facility in the city of Carmel is the Carmel Youth Center. But according to the center's directors, the facility serves only about 100 youths.

There is a Carmel group working to enlarge the scope and membership of the center. The Youth Activities Committee was organized by Mary Wagner, 30, of Carmel, in December.

"The aims are not political. We just want to get more kids involved in the community," she said.

Mrs. Wagner visited the center in January. "The facility appeared to be in a state of disrepair. It looked like no one was using it," she said.

Mrs. Wagner says she is working along with some student government representatives from the Carmel High School to "rejuvenate" the Youth Center.

Many teens are not motivated to seek changes

The group has taken no actions yet, but it plans to sponsor a contest at the high school this month to rename the Youth Center. Many students say they object to the present name.

But a survey of the students involved in the "renovation" drive revealed that only two had even been inside the center.

"The center needs highly energetic people involved to plan outside activities such as ski trips or backpacking expeditions," Wagner said.

Youth Center board members reply that the cost for insurance on such outings is prohibitive. Activities preferred by today's youth "are a little bit sophisticated" for the Youth Center, said Peter Tersol, the board treasurer.

The Youth Center adult board has rejected offers of financial aid from the city of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District. It prefers to be independent. The board fears that outside financial assistance could lead to adult use of the center. Such use would be contrary to the center's founding goals.

Any adult use could require payment for all the donated labor, material and money that helped build the center 28 years ago, according to James Kalber, president of the adult board.

The center has three pool tables located in its basement, but the basement is damp, poorly lighted and has no heater. Board members say it would cost too much to heat the basement.

Mrs. Wagner suggests that a program coordinator could work with Jack Giles, the director, to improve the center and increase its membership.

"If we want kids to stay in Carmel, there has to be something we can offer them. I don't know if I'd want to raise my children here," she said.

The Youth Center auditorium was converted into a skateboard arena last year. It once was used for dances, but the dances were not well attended. But only one or two skateboarders can use the facility at the same time. Safety equipment — helmets and knee pads — are mandatory; the hardwood floor there still poses a serious hazard. The insurance agent who writes the center's policy has asked a board member to discourage skateboarding there.

A PROPER skateboard facility requires a minimum of 1.5 acres, according to the American Skateboard Association. The number of skateboard parks is increasing in the U.S. More than 100 were completed last year and the association predicts there will be more than 1,000 by 1980.

Some Carmel youths say a skateboard park would satisfy their recreation needs. Skateboarding is outlawed in the business district of Carmel, however. Skateboards are not allowed anywhere on the high school campus, according to Nick Nicholson, assistant principal. Both Nicholson and Police Chief William Ellis say skateboards present too many dangers.

The mayor of Carmel disagrees. "There are certain perils in growing up and kids must face them. I started out on roller skates," Mayor Gunnar Norberg says.

Despite all of the talk about reckless skateboarders, Norberg says automobile drivers are just as much at fault. But he says there are not sufficient funds for a skateboard park in Carmel. The expenditure would serve too few people, Norberg says.

"Everything I see about skateboard parks says $1 million," City Administrator Jack Collins says. Collins says he would consider such a facility if the price range were closer to $30,000.

A skateboard park built in the southern California city of Westminster last year cost $10,000, according to Judy Kelsey, the assistant city administrator. But $9,000 was spent for maintenance and personnel at the park.

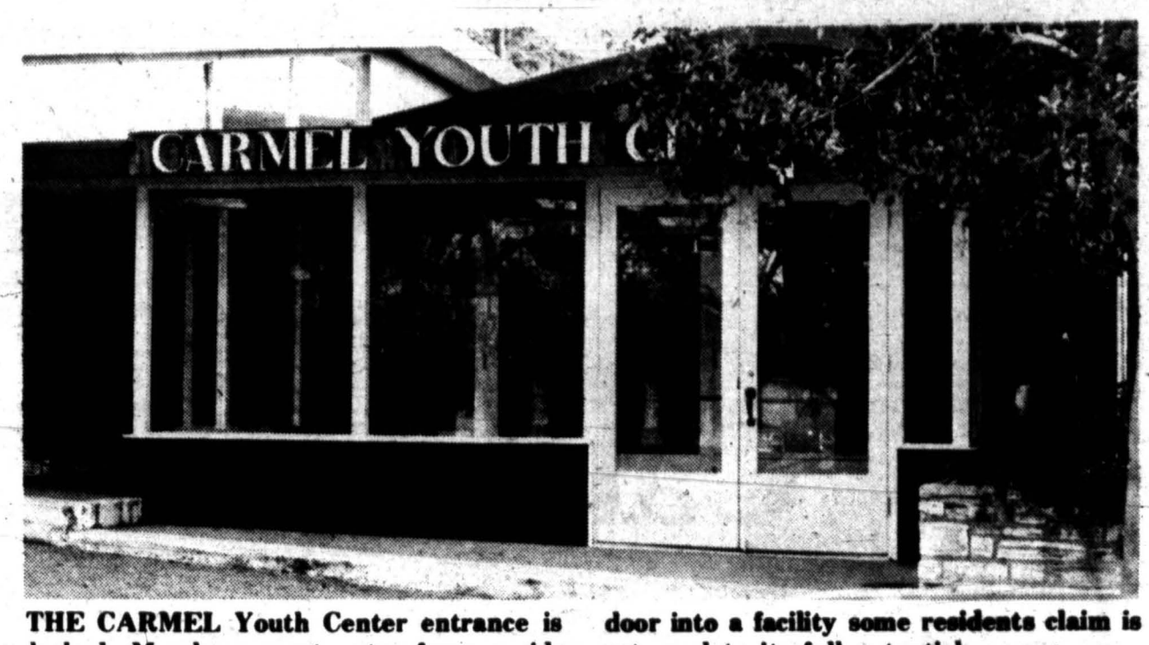
The 5,000-square-foot "novice-run" opened in February 1977 as part of a larger $200,000 park.

"It was very well received when it first opened, then attendance dropped to less than 100 per day," Mrs. Kelsey said.

Problems crop up when a skateboard park opens, according to the American Skateboard Association. A park often draws people from a large geographical area. If placed in a residential area, noise may bother residents. The parks also can present parking problems, the association says. They suggest one parking space for every four participants.

But the Westminster park's biggest problem has been insurance. Only six months after opening, the insurance policy on the park was canceled. There had been

...nswers' found



THE CARMEL Youth Center entrance is locked. Members must enter from a side door into a facility some residents claim is not used to its full potential.

no accidents and no claims were filed in the six-month period. The park was closed and still is closed.

Any city considering a skateboard park should perform a risk-management analysis first, Mrs. Kelsey warns. "It requires plenty of cautious planning," she says. A city would do better to lease such a facility to a private company, she suggests.

If Carmel were to build a skateboard park, Forest Hill Park, in the northeast section, would be the most likely spot, according to City Planning Director Bob Griggs.

The city forester and city administrator are working on a proposal for improvements at Forest Hill Park, including the installation of playground equipment and renovating the shuffleboard courts. The city applied for $30,000 in state park improvement funds for the project. The funds will be available in July.

But the city is not bound to the recreation use already proposed by City Forester Gregory D'Ambrosio. The funds could be used for converting a portion of the park into a skateboard facility. D'Ambrosio, however, does not favor such a venture. A skateboard park requires constant supervision, he says. "My feeling is the park should have a passive use."

SUNSET CENTER has only a "passive" use by local youths, according to Richard Tyler, the director of the center.

"There are no programs in the center entirely devoted to young people," he said, cording to Tyler. "You never really know if you have them. The very people who ask for these programs are often the ones who do not show up."

Folk music concerts have not worked well at Sunset, according to Tyler.

The most recent folk concert, in April 1977, forced the custodians to do "extra cleaning" afterward, Tyler says. The concert featured folk guitarist John Fahey and it "sold well," Tyler admits, but wine bottles and other debris were later found in the auditorium and around the Sunset grounds.

Similar concerts at Forest Theater have had the same results, Tyler adds. A folk concert there in 1972 upset neighbors who complained to police about the noise.

Broadcast equipment is allowed at Forest Theater "provided the amplification of sound not exceed that reasonably needed for the reasonable enjoyment of the patrons," the city code says.

A permit for the use of broadcast equipment at other locations may be issued by the City Council. A written application must be submitted and approved. The City Council determines if the general public interest is served and if the surrounding vicinity would be disturbed.

A SUBCOMMITTEE of a City Council ad hoc committee is studying another request voiced by Carmel citizens, young and old. The cost of building and maintaining a public swimming pool is now under investigation.

It is still undecided if the proposed pool would be indoors or outdoors. The location also is undecided. The study is the result of a poll about a proposed $2.5 million recreation facility, mailed in November to post office box holders in Carmel. Of the 641 persons who returned the poll, 327 favored the addition of a pool.

Young people complain that the outdoor high school pool is not usable year 'round. Some said public swimming should not be limited to the summer months.

Complaints also have been made about the high school curriculum. Some students say they want classes other than those offered. Others say they want a facility where they can socialize during free hours.

The process could take more than a year, but Assistant Principal Nicholson says it has been done before. The key is to present a well-devised course not already offered, Nicholson says.

ONE HIGH school teacher says student dissension is caused by classes that do not prepare students for anything. Richard Fletcher, 33, teaches classes in health and advanced biology. The purpose of his health class is "to teach the students how to survive," he says.

"Algebra I prepares students for Algebra II, but what happens when they graduate?" he asks. More than half the freshmen who flunk out of college "just cannot handle all the freedom," he says.

The teacher claims he has an answer to many student problems: teach them what they want to learn. They ask him questions that do not generally come up in math or history classes, like how to get dates or how to raise kids.

How to raise kids is something many Carmel parents never learned well, say a juvenile court judge, a juvenile probation officer and sheriff's deputy.

THERE ARE a million answers why kids get into trouble, but at the bottom you often find parents who just don't care," says Ray George, a deputy at the sheriff's substation in Monterey.

"When their kids are out drinking and raising hell, a lot of parents are just happy their kids aren't bothering them," George says.

Many parents do not realize it is their own kids involved in juvenile crimes. "The typical kid who ends up here from Carmel or the Valley is white and middle class," notes William Brazil, a probation officer for the County Juvenile Probation Department.

When a youngster gets into trouble, the courts can only make orders "relative to the juveniles," says Brazil. The parents remain blameless, he adds.

Carmel youngsters who get into trouble are generally sent through diversionary processes, said Richard Silver, a presiding Monterey County juvenile court judge. "That is good. The goal is to refine, not punish," he says.

How can a community keep its young people out of juvenile court?

"It's simple. Give them something to do," Judge Silver says.

Rock concerts ruled out at Sunset Center

"but that isn't because we haven't tried."

Students can save up to half-price on most Sunset Center events by obtaining student discount tickets.

The question asked repeatedly by Carmel's young people: Why doesn't Carmel get any rock concerts?

The two-part answer: First, no place seems big enough; second, a city ordinance forbids the use of amplifiers without a special permit.

Sunset Center Theater, the largest in town, seats 732. "The space just is not big enough for that type of concert," says Tyler.

Could a rock concert work at Sunset? "It is a concert hall, not a rock hall," Tyler answered. He noted the fixed seating could not give youngsters the "freedom" they would want. "The theater does not lend itself to that atmosphere," he says.

Cost is another problem. A "major" act demands at least $2,500 for a concert, Tyler says. Rock concert tickets would have to sell for a minimum $6, he estimates.

Teenage audiences can be fickle, ac-

Theater for children is one solution, says director of troupe

Carmel has one youth organization that does not sell cookies and which will not ask the mayor to toss out the first pitch this spring.

The Children's Experimental Theater does more than teach youngsters from 6 to 16 years old how to act. "We can increase their ability to concentrate and communicate," explains Marcia Hovick, director of the group that began eight years ago with 25 children.

About half of its 120 members are from Carmel, according to Mrs. Hovick. "We make the productions their bag, not ours," she says.

The group performs and practices primarily at the Theater-in-the-Ground, underneath the Forest Theater stage. There are no tryouts. The only requirement is a $160 annual fee. The six classes practice weekly and perform primarily in Carmel.

The group received a $2,000 grant from the city this year, Hovick says. It rents the Theater-in-the-Ground for $115 per month.

"We treat the kids like adults. We do not waste their time," Hovick explains.

Youth employment picture is good in Carmel area

"If you can't find a job in Carmel, you'll never find a job."

The 16-year-old Carmel High School student who says this found three jobs in one week. "I didn't really want the jobs. I just wanted to see if I could get them," he says.

There appears to be plenty of work available here for young people. Students who do not want to knock on doors themselves can find job placement available through the Student Employment Service in Monterey.

Some 93 Carmel students, 16 years and up, filled positions offered through the employment service last year. Of 665 Peninsula student jobs filled, 138 were in Carmel, according to statistics supplied by the nonprofit agency.

"Almost every Carmel youngster who applies here for a job gets one," says Dorothy Murphy, an employment representative at the agency.

Many of the jobs involve yard work, house cleaning or window washing. Restaurant and motel jobs are particularly easy to obtain, Murphy says.

Most of the jobs pay the minimum $2.60 hourly wage, she adds.

The employment service tries to fill local jobs with local residents. Applications are available at the Student Employment Service, 480 Webster St., Monterey. The service is free for students and employers.

Good California wines are available for $2

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

The Wine Connoisseur

INFLATION, THE whims and caprices of Mother Nature and the forces of supply and demand add up to you know what — higher and higher wine prices.

Only this week, we received a letter from a longtime Chicago reader who declared: "I am a fellow who does not mind paying $2 for an ordinary day-to-day bottle of wine, or $3 to $4 for a weekend spree, but who could never cover the field as it stands now without advice."

To find a $2 bottle of wine today requires very special guidance, especially in imported wines. Equally reliable advice is needed to find the better bottlings of inexpensive California wine. The Almaden Mountain wines of generic titles, i.e.; Chablis, Burgundy, Rhine, etc., are in this area, and dependable values at $1.89. The Beringer/Los Hermanos wines are $2.99 for the big 1.5 liter (50.7 ounces) of generic Chablis, Burgundy and Rose, and $3.19 for popular varietals of Johannisberg Riesling, Zinfandel, Chenin Blanc. Another 20 cents per 1.5 liter, and you can have the outstanding Chardonnay or Gamay Beaujolais at $3.39.

Don't pass by the JFJ quart carafes from the Bronco Winery of Ceres, Calif., if you find them in your market. As we've mentioned before, the young brothers and cousins of the Franzia family are providing some of the best bargains in inexpensive wine on the American market. Cabernet Sauvignon, French Colombard, and Chenin Blanc at 99 cents sounds almost too cheap to believe, but these are sound wines of remarkable value for everyday use.

We've said it before, and we'll say it again, about the fine value of the Gallo Hearty Burgundy and Chablis Blanc, which are $1.59 on the West Coast, and $2.89 for the double-sized 1.5-liter bottling. Few if any of the above have vintage dates. They're blended wines for present pouring rather than any cellar aging — mostly screw-cap wines.

When we move into cork-finished, vintage wines of California or any of the European wine countries, the story changes. Any wine you may find at $2 is too risky to consider, and it takes some doing to come home with any gems at $3.

WITHIN THE last couple weeks, I've had the chance to taste quite a number of German wines in presentations by importers and as well the German American Chamber of Commerce.

For whatever reasons, American consumption of German wines is on the upswing. In 1977 the U.S. share of all German export wines amounted to 38 per cent. Three English-speaking countries take a combined 70 per cent, with 22 per cent going to the United Kingdom and 10 per cent going to Canada. Our rate of increase has been a steady 30 per cent over the past five years, with emphasis upon the better, or Qualitatswein and finer Qualitatswein mit Pradikat.

Our informant, with whom we shared a half-dozen spectacular '76s of the Rhine and Mosel, was Hans Walter Kendermann, one of the youngest and most important German exporters, accountable for more than a million cases shipped per year.

The '70s have been pretty good for German wine-growers. Connoisseurs become starry-eyed about the '71s, and there are still some fine examples to be found in the market. Expensive, of course. The weather for both '75 and '76 stressed the vines with meager rainfall, but produced superb wines in the quality classifications, with not much left over for the necessary bulk wine market of tafelwein, or ordinary "table wine."

The situation reversed in '77. Poor weather and rain right into the harvest period turned the whole vintage into tafelwein categories. It doesn't take much marketing insight to predict the pricing trend for those good '75s and '76s. They're already showing increases, and more will be in order. For the dependable little Blue Nun 1975 Liebfraumilch, the price is now $4.49. It's a good wine, but there is better. From H. Sichel Soehne, the bottlers of Blue Nun, the 1976 Liebfraumilch Spaetlese (a Qualitatswein mit Pradikat), the West Coast price is $7.69.

Bargains in German wines, with quality in mind, are not easily found. For Liebfraumilch, the 1976 Goldener Oktober Liebfraumilch, bottled by St. Ursula Weinkellerei of Bingen-am-Rhein, imported by Crosse & Blackwell, at $3.29 is positive value. The wine is fairly dry, long and silky.

Even the usually rather commonplace Kroever Nacktarsch of the Mosel, in its 1975 edition from Michel Schneider, imported by Acme Food Specialties of Los Angeles, becomes a wine of some substance, and well worth its $3.29 price tag. One moves towards an understanding of the importance of the sugar/acid balance in the delicacy of German wines with the 1976 Uerziger Schwarzlay Riesling Kabinet of Peter Nicolay, imported by Eric Preiss Co. for Mission Cellars International. It moves up to $4.95. In the terms of our correspondent, it's a "weekend spree" wine, but from inflation through the market's present evolution, it's on the lower steps up to the Qualitatswein mit Pradikat selections. Demand for wines of such greater style and elegance by the American wine consumer, in the observation of Herr Kendermann, makes them valuable property, indeed.

Where, one wonders, are the prices for comparable California wines? And are there comparable California wines? Watch this space next week for some wines that hold the answers to these good questions for thirsty wine lovers who enjoy the nectar of the Riesling grape.

Tokyo String Quartet performs March 9 at Sunset Center

The Tokyo String Quartet will perform Thursday, March 9, at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert is sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

The quartet was founded in 1970 by Ralph Hillyer, the founding violinist of the Juilliard String Quartet. Members of the quartet were graduated from the Toho School in Tokyo, where they studied with Hideo Saito, after which they came to New York City to study with the Juilliard String Quartet.

The concert program will include Quartet No. 46 in D major, Opus 20, No. 4, by Haydn; Quartet in E minor "From My Life," by Smetna; and Quartet in C minor, Opus 131, by Beethoven.

In 1970, the Tokyo Quartet won first prize in the Coleman String Quartet competition in California. Four months later, they won first prize in the International Chamber Music competition in Munich. They made their New York City debut in Town Hall the same year, and have toured the United States and Europe every year since.

Members of the quartet — violinist Koichiro Harada, violinist Kikuei Ikeda, violist Kazuhide Isomura and violoncellist Sadao Harada — perform exclusively on the 300-year-old Amati instruments on loan to them from the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.

The first violin, known as a grand Amati, was created by Nicolo Amati in 1656 for the court of France under Louis XIV. It was made in the grand pattern with double purfling and tiny rubies and emeralds inlaid in wood. The second violin was created by Amati in 1662. The viola, made in Cremona in 1663, has a tenor-like timbre and is a large model with uncut dimensions. The cello, made in 1677, also has uncut dimensions.

Gabora to solo in concerts with symphony

Soprano Gaelyne Gabora will be the featured soloist in the Monterey County Symphony concerts Sunday; Monday and Tuesday, March 5-7. Concerts are scheduled Sunday at King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey; Monday at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel; and Tuesday at Sherwood Hall, 940 North Main St., Salinas. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

The program includes the Overture from the Marriage of Figaro, by Mozart; operatic arias by Mozart and Verdi; and Symphony No. 4 in G major by Gustav Mahler.

A graduate of the Vienna Academy of Music, Miss Gabora has toured Russia three times. Her first tour, in 1975, was such a sensation that the second two were sold out weeks in advance. Her concert repertoire consists of hundreds of works which she sings in 12 languages.

Haymo Taeuber is conductor and music director of the 70-member symphony orchestra which achieved metropolitan status in 1972-73 and is classed as one of the top 100 symphony orchestras in the United States.

Swann to return for Sunset concert

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THOUGH ONLY in his mid-20s, Jeffrey Swann has a highly respected international career and an extensive array on honors. In June 1975, Jeffrey Swann won the Dino Ciani International Piano Competition sponsored by La Scala in Milan, Italy, receiving $5,000, a gold medal, an RCA-Italy recording contract, appearances with the La Scala Orchestra and numerous solo recitals in the 1975-76 season in such Italian cities as Milan, Rome, Florence, Naples and Genoa.

As winner of the 1974 Young Concert Artists International Auditions, he was presented in his highly acclaimed New York recital debut in the Young Concert Artists Series at Hunter College, and he performed the opening concert of the 1975-76 series. Most recently, Swann won the coveted Bronze Medal in the difficult Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

In January, Swann appeared at Sunset Theater as soloist with the San Jose Youth Symphony. His performance of the Tchaikovsky 1st Piano Concerto received unanimous acclaim. We are fortunate to be able to present Swann in a solo recital Saturday, March 11, at 8 p.m. in Sunset Theater. Reserved tickets are available by calling the director's office, 624-3996. Tickets are $5 and $4 and, special student discount rate, $2.50.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY, Explorama will present Royal London in Sunset Theater at 8:15 p.m. This unusual journey through a thousand years of English history includes highlights of the Knights of the Garter ceremony at Windsor Castle; a moving tribute to Winston Churchill; the abdication of Edward VIII; Trooping the Colour with the Royal Family; and today's London by day and night. It is a fascinating new film of an extraordinary city. For more information, phone 624-9446.

ONE OF THE GREAT concert singers of today, Canadian soprano Gaelyne Gabora, will be a guest soloist with the Monterey County Symphony in its regular concert on Monday at 8 p.m. in the Sunset Theater. She will sing operatic arias of Mozart and Verdi. The major orchestral offering will be Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major, in which Miss Gabora will sing the solo part. Ticket information is available from the symphony office, 624-8511.

A STAFF PLAYERS PRODUCTION TO BENEFIT THE CHILDREN'S EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

Orpheus chamber group fills in for Nash Ensemble

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

Music Corner

FRIDAY'S CHAMBER Music Society program was supposed to be played by the Nash Ensemble, but instead featured the Orpheus Chamber Ensemble of New York. While the Orpheus played a most enjoyable concert, I was disappointed at not hearing the Nash Ensemble, which made one of the most interesting records of recent years, Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire, with cabaret talent Cleo Laine singing the words in English.

Though the Orpheus Ensemble consists of as many as 25 players, only five were on hand for the Mozart Clarinet Trio, the Beethoven String Trio in C minor, Contrasts by Bartok and the Brahms Piano Quartet in C minor. It was a very rich program and showed the players to be of quite different temperaments and imagination.

That Mozart was generally turned off by the flute certainly did not inhibit him from writing beautiful music for that instrument, to say nothing of the other woodwinds. If anything, he demonstrated over and over an affection for and mastery of the winds, as a group, that represent a major advance in the classical use of these instruments. His writing for the clarinet is unique and is seriously imitated only by Brahms. The most beautiful of Mozart's clarinet music is to be found in the slow movements of those too few works that feature this intrument. In this realm is some of the most haunting and poignant of the composer's musical expression. It is a curiosity that in Trio in E-flat, K. 498, Mozart does not exploit the clarinet with the same intensity as with the Quintet in A or the Concerto in A. The slow movement in the Trio is the first — an andante — and the unique scoring of viola and piano implies and develops a different character for this work.

THE ORPHEUS program opened with this Mozart Trio and in it we met David Singer, who plays a beautiful clarinet, Naoko Tanaka, a highly polished viola (and violin) player, and the musically generous and ebullient pianist, Patricia Michaelian. The reading was understated and beautiful. Michaelian was especially charming in the work's final movement.

For the Beethoven String Trio in C minor, Op. 9, No. 3, we were introduced to violinist (and later, violist) Joanna Jenner, who is not possessed of the same polish as her colleagues but who displays a musicality and expression that set her apart. This also was our first hearing of the Orpheus Ensemble founder, cellist Julian Fifer, who makes a beautiful, if generally soft, sound, and whose phrasing and expression are chamber-ensemble oriented and not bravura.

This Beethoven work was endowed with sensitive ensemble playing, a rather deliberate character in its expressive adagio, and tempestuous drama in the opening allegro and the scherzo.

Bartok's Contrasts for Clarinet, Violin and Piano was composed in 1938. Like many of Bartok's works, it exploits Hungarian folk music (including a scordatura violin part seeking that "down-home" gypsy flavor), but is a most sophisticated work. It consists of Recruiting Dance (much more sober sounding than its accompanying anecdote suggested), Relaxation, and Fast Dance. The work features many coloristic techniques, like a laughing clarinet and string mutes and pizzicato. It was played with great skill and style, but not with a particularly Hungarian character.

The wonderful Brahms Piano Quartet in C minor, Op. 60 was the concert's final work and it revealed more clearly the differences of temperament between the players. For this, the violin was played and with impeccable technique by Tanaka. Miss Jenner took up the viola. After the work's dramatic introduction, the main theme was presented with great breadth and quite marvelously by pianist Michaelian. This set the mood for the entire reading. The scherzo, a short statement that, in its brevity and dramatic build, reminds me of the third movement of the Brahms Symphony No. 3, was displayed with flair. In the third movement, the soft-spoken cello of Fifer at last took the spotlight and was beautifully played with character, grace and lovely tone. In this rhapsodic movement, some of the evening's finest music was heard. The final allegro brought the work to a most satisfying conclusion. As this ensemble matures, there is likely to develop a better melding of the strict chamber intimacy of some of the players with the bravura impulses expressed by the others. Some of the playing was highly polished and suffered excessive restraint, some was technically less than what it could be, and some was simply ideal. The ensemble needs attention to its stylistic goals and would achieve, thereby, a more unified concept.

The Tokyo Quartet, a splendid ensemble, is the Chamber Music Society's next attraction, on Thursday, March 9.

The National Ballet of Illinois performance will be reviewed in next week's Pine Cone.

Theatre review:

'Candida' is sensitive, gently humorous

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

It is hard to imagine better casting for the part of the Reverend James Mavor Morell than York School's headmaster, Henry Littlefield. He is just the healthy, hearty, attractive sort of man Shaw describes, and his characterization is so perfect as to appear effortless. His warmth and geniality seem entirely genuine, and make his crumpling like a great baby at the thought of losing his wife's love very moving.

Equally strong is Richard Boynton in the part of Eugene Marchbanks, the tortured, hypersensitive poet. He is so bizarre that he could easily seem absurd, but as Boynton plays him he is a sympathetic character, if not one who would be comfortable to have around.

Shaw has a fine time contrasting the moral Morell and the March Hare Marchbanks, having each of them point out how the other fails to live up to his own ideals, as they vie for the love of Candida. As Marchbanks correctly states, the Christian Socialist Morell exploits all those in his household; and as Morell points out, Marchbanks is an aristocratic parasite. The contrast in their physical appearances plays well, too, Morell a ruddy tower of seeming strength against the pale, contorted, cringing Marchbanks.

As the fulcrum on which these two opposites balance, Susan Aronson's Candida is graceful and elegant, an all-knowing mother who easily controls her two boys. She is much wiser about the human heart than either preacher or poet. She has, for example, discerned long since the nature of "Prossy's complaint" — the tendency of all the women who work for Morell, and all those who think they come to hear him preach, to fall in love with him.

Lee Brady, as Proserpine Garnett, the buried jewel, makes it clear to the audience long before it is to Marchbanks that she does indeed love Morell. Her confusion and her irritation with Marchbanks and Burgess are both touching and funny. All her little mannerisms are perfect. There are some nice directorial touches in her part, too, from the sticking of a pencil into her bun when there is already one nesting there to her beautifully timed slow boil when confronting Burgess.

Eben Swift plays Burgess, the only other member of the lower classes, as more nearly a caricature than a fleshed-out character. He functions as a kind of chorus, commenting with earthy common sense on the foibles of the rest. He is the only one given an accent, and a difficult one at that, which he handles quite well. It seems to me an example of the director's wisdom not to give the entire cast British accents; they are not needed to remind us of the setting, and too often sound artificial and self-conscious.

Adam Lembec is fine in the small part of the Reverend Alexander Mill, who serves as an example of how others strive to emulate — or at least imitate — Morell.

Todd C. Jonz's set makes excellent use of the limited space at Bishop Center, in an area recently converted from library stacks. The heavy furniture and antique typewriter establish the time and place, as well as socioeconomic level. The costumes, by Loel Shuler, are equally effective, and the actors seem perfectly at home in them. The layers under which Prossy camouflages herself are particularly appropriate.

Copies of the dramatic poster by Susan Long are available for $2 at the theater — a definite bonus. Poster sales, along with ticket sales, go toward meeting CET's $10,000 fund-raising goal.

Candida plays Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8:30. Do see it.

Film about London to be shown

Filmmaker Doug Jones will narrate his new travel/adventure film Royal London at the Explorama program Thursday and Friday, March 2-3, 8:15 p.m., at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

In the film, Jones traces 1,000 years of English history and highlights landmarks of the 20th century. Film highlights include Queen Elizabeth II Trooping the Colours on her official birthday; Sir Harold Wilson installed as Knight of the Garter in Windsor Castle; a rare look inside Big Ben; a tribute to Sir Winston Churchill; and a story of the abdication of Edward VIII.

Many of the familiar scenes of London are shown, including Westminster Abbey, the double-decker buses, pubs, Picadilly Circus and many more.

Doug Jones is a graduate of the University of Missouri with a degree in radio and television broadcasting. He has visited 30 countries since he began to make travel films in 1965.

Tickets, at $3.75, are available at the Julia Marlowe Box Office in Sunset Senter.

A bite of Britain

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

Doug Jones, one of America's leading travel-adventure film producers, uses the kings and queens as his guides to London in his latest full-length color feature, Royal London. The Explorama film will be screened at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday and Friday at Sunset Center.

My role is to plan little suppers that remind us of London. These should take place by 6 p.m. the night you and your guests are going to see Royal London.

English Kidney Pie

Split 12 lamb kidneys, removing skins and tubes, or have your best meat man prepare them for you. Insist on their being absolutely fresh. Soak them overnight in water with a splash of white vinegar. Rinse in cold water before cooking; keep refrigerated until ready.

Boil kidneys in 1 cup water with one sliced onion and salt and pepper to taste until kidneys are tender. As herbs do not add calories, sprinkle some powdered rosemary over all.

Make two pie crusts from 2 cups flour, 1 cup butter, some freshly ground black pepper and one freshest egg. Knead together with floured fingers. Fit one crust into bottom of pie tin. Fill with kidney mixture and cover with other crust. Bake in hot oven. Serve hot or cold. I prefer mine hot and not nine days old. Right out of the oven, with crushed oregano. It will serve four bountifully. Frozen whole string beans go well, buttered.

This is the quickest "before-the-theater" offering I have prepared myself. Its beauty is that the filling can be made adding sliced mushrooms. We like a green salad tossed at the table with a light lemon juice and olive oil dressing.

If you want to become elegant for a birthday event (people are proud of them nowadays), buy the very best roast of beef you can find. We have found it a waste to do otherwise. Cook according to your preference. We like the truly British Yorkshire pudding taken from Myra Waldo's Round-the-World Cookbook.

Yorkshire Pudding

Sift 2 cups flour with 1 teaspoon salt in a bowl. Gradually add 1 cup light cream and 1 cup milk, beating well. Next add four eggs, beating vigorously. Cover and refrigerate one hour. Heat 1 cup beef drippings in an 8-inch-square pan. Beat the batter, then stir into pan. Bake until pudding is crisp and brown. We have found with our oven that 450° is the best for 15 minutes; reduce to 350° for 15 minutes. This traditional accompaniment to top quality roast of beef is to be found at the British "pub" the Bully III, if ordered ahead.

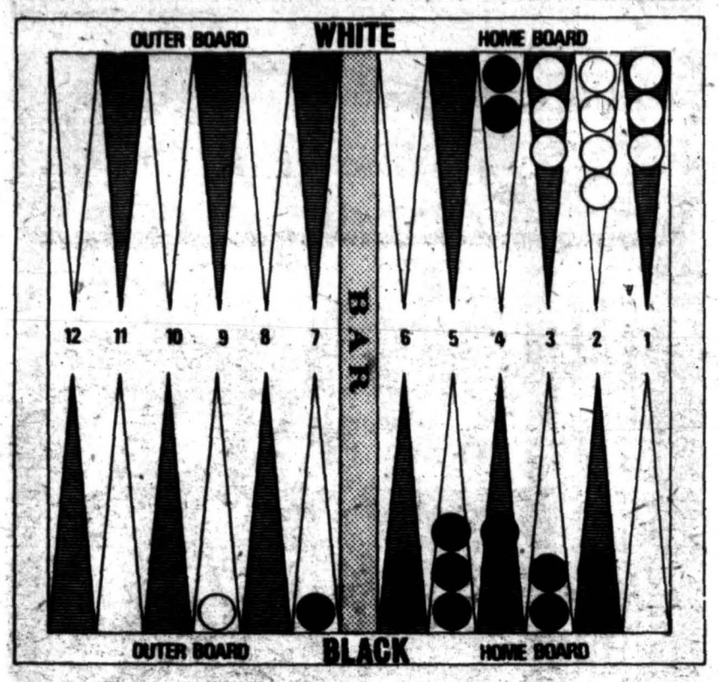
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



Black rolls 4-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

White has already borne off four men, so there is no question about who is winning the race. However, Black is not yet lost. White has a runner in Black's outer board that must still be brought round to safety. Until such time as White accomplishes this, Black is in the game.

Indeed, Black still has a fair chance to turn defeat into victory. He can bring that about if he succeeds in hitting the White runner and then in closing the board while the White man remains on the bar.

To achieve this, Black must give himself the maximum chance of hitting the White runner as it comes round the board to safety. The problem is how best to position the Black men for a shot at the White runner.

The average roll from a pair of dice, taking doublets into account, is fractionally over 8. If we take that into account, we can expect the White runner to be somewhere around the White 8-point. Therefore, we should not use the 4 to move a man to White's 8-point, because there is a chance that it might get hit and, even if it survives, it could be too close to the White man to be maximally effective.

Therefore, we must play the 4 inside the Black home board, either by bringing home the man on the 7-point or by slotting on the 1-point from the 5-point. I slightly prefer the latter, because it increases the possibility of making the 1-point.

Since it cannot be right to have two men on the same point with which to try to hit the White runner, our choice of move for the 2 is now solved. We use it to play a man from the White 4-point to his 6-point. That will considerably increase the number of combinations with which we can hit.

Gesinus-Visser exhibit opens Sat. at Zantman

A one-man exhibit of paintings by Bob Gesinus-Visser will open with a reception Saturday, March 4, 6-9 p.m., at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

The exhibit, planned as an 80th birthday celebration for the Dutch artist, will instead be a memorial exhibit. Gesinus-Visser died Jan. 5 in Cannes.

The Zantman exhibit includes a wide selection of his final works painted in 1976 and 1977.

A native of the Netherlands, Gesinus-Visser went to France as a young man, where he studied art and showed his paintings with Picasso, Matisse, Liebermann, Kokoschka, Utrillo, Vlaminck, Kees van Dongen and many others. His paintings have been shown in one-man and group exhibits in galleries around the world since 1927.

Gesinus-Visser became famous not only for his paintings but also for his outgoing personality and his colorful life style (he was twice a millionaire) as a high-living aristocrat. He lived in the Netherlands, France, Germany, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Bolivia and the United States.

Carmel Highlands linguist to be inaugurated at Monterey Institute

Dr. Jack Kolbert, a Carmel Highlands resident and consultant to the Nobel Prize Committee for Literature, will be inaugurated as the fourth president of the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies on Saturday, March 11.

Kolbert's inauguration will take place at 4 p.m. in the John Steinbeck Forum at the Monterey Conference Center. The guest speaker will be Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho), who will deliver a speech entitled "Human Rights and the National Interest."

Kolbert, a former professor of modern languages at the University of New Mexico, was the head of the French section of the language department there. While on the faculty, he also served as president of the Albuquerque City Council.

He officially assumed his post at the Monterey Institute on July 25, 1977. Between 1960 and 1965, he was chairman of the department of Romance Languages at the University of Pittsburgh. He is an honorary consul for France in the United States and has received several of France's highest awards, including the Knighthood of the National Order of Merit and the Officership of Academic Palms.

"I look forward to the challenges ahead at the Monterey Institute," said Kolbert. Sierra Club president to speak

Sierra Club President Bill Futrell, a law professor from Georgia, will be the speaker at the annual dinner of the club's Ventana Chapter on Friday at Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

Futrell joined the club in 1962 after returning from service with the U.S. Marine Corps in East Asia and has represented the club in Washington, D.C.

In addition to the speech by Futrell, the new chapter officers and executive committee will be introduced and presentations made of awards for "Outstanding Conservationist of the Year" and "Outstanding Contributions to the Chapter."

The incumbent, Mrs. Arnold

A lot has been made of what is an apparent split between those who would serve the residents and those who would serve the business community. Is there actually a split that follows that line in Carmel or is it really something that has been blown out of proportion?

I think it has been exaggerated. There are two members of the council who seem to be applauding the idea that there is a schism. I would rather think that the business community and the residential community are independent, which they are in fact, and we are primarily a resident-oriented community and that's the way all my votes and actions are projected.

You say it is primarily a residential community and that was the intent in the founding of Carmel. Why have commercial interests prospered and grown in Carmel if it was agreed early in history that Carmel would be a residential community?

That's an impossible question to answer for me or anyone else. A place as beautiful as this can't be kept a secret. People want to come to see it. We don't want to deny people the right to come to see it, but we do object to the abuse of the public sometimes that makes it the seaside resorting sort of place that we're trying to avoid. We're trying to protect the beautiful aspects and keep them as nearly unspoiled as we can and still let people enjoy them.

Has the village atmosphere of Carmel deteriorated since the 30s, when you first came here?

I wouldn't use the word deteriorated. I think it's been severely affected by growth and by just the sheer numbers of people that have been brought here.

If it has been affected, has it been affected for the good or for the bad?

Well, that's a two-sided question. The business revenues have been steadily climbing ever since the early 70s and the residents have been affected by the congestion and traffic that the revenues and the people coming here have brought.

What do you mean when you say it has been affected? It's an inconvenience on Saturday or Sunday in town, but how does the increased commercial activity in Carmel affect the resident?

It makes it more difficult to get around town, the parking problem is more difficult. There is more general pollution from the traffic for instance, and it makes it harder for police to enforce laws because there are more violations now with the increase of people; trees are suffering, the beach is suffering.

There is an interdependency between the residential community and the business community. Isn't there a cross pollenization of the taxes collected?

Quite obviously the large percentage of the budget comes from revenues from tourist oriented business and I sometimes wonder if the residents would even be satisfied with less services in exchange for a little less congestion. In the final analysis, the residents themselves have to decide these things.

For instance, if you want to increase parking and make parking lots we could look at Sausalito, where they have bought property in the different parts of town to create parking and instead of solving the problem, it has made the problem worse because they have not only those cars that they have arranged for scattered about the city but a lot of other cars on the streets. So they have doubled their problem rather than solving it, in my opinion.

You're described as a "pro-resident" candidate and I'm wondering what evidence you could show that you are.

I think the residents still find it a lovely place to live and that's what I'm trying to protect. I'm not anti-business, please don't misunderstand me. I come from a business oriented family and I recognize the need for business. At the same time, I don't like to see the community and the beauty of the community abused in any way.

Do you think that any of the positions that you have taken in the past two years have jeopardized or endangered the health of Carmel business?

Quite the contrary, I think the stands that I have taken are for the protection of the business community. You can overdevelop a place to the point to where it ceases to become an attractive place to visit and I think the overdevelopment, the lessening of the quality of shops, for instance, in Carmel, would have a very serious effect on it being an attractive place to come.

You used the verb "would." Has that happened?

I think that I'd rather not see any more franchise businesses. We all agree; after one was in, we took measures to prevent any more coming in. I think that it's a shame that there is one. I'm speaking of Orange Julius. That type of business doesn't belong in Carmel.

Why not?

Because if we let franchise businesses into Carmel, it would be just like every other community on the coast. We would be like any other seaside resort and we would at once lose our unique, beautiful community. That's why, if we don't take some restrictive measures to keep ourselves unique, then we will no longer be unique.

HELEN E. ARNOLD, 58, was appointed to the Carmel City Council in September 1976. She has served the unexpired term of Eugene Hammond, who resigned as mayor because of health and business reasons. She declined to discuss the sources of her income other than to say she had bought and sold real estate. Mrs. Arnold moved here from Salinas in 1955 and is the mother of a son, 30, and a daughter, 26.

Would that include franchises that do not sell food? I. Magnin, for instance, is a franchise, a chain. Would you apply the same standard to an I. Magnin that you would to an Orange Julius?

Well, they aren't comparable. However, sometime back an auction studio tried to establish a business in Carmel and I think that would have been a terrible thing to allow. We did manage to pass laws to halt that activity.

Would you differentiate between one type of chain and another type of chain?

Not really. Because, for instance, if say Safeway were to build a store in Carmel, that would be a franchise store. I'd much rather see a small type of grocery store that would serve the residents and we have a Safeway at the mouth of the Valley, which is close enough. I would generally not be in favor of any franchise business that would make Carmel any other place.

You favored the new minimum parking requirement for new restaurants, the law that would have tied the number of seats to the amount of parking a restaurant would have to offer. Wasn't that supposed to be aimed at reducing the number of restaurants that served alcoholic beverages?

That law would have no affect whatsoever on the existing restaurants. It would only affect new restaurants or the existing ones which wanted to increase their existing capacities. The amount of four-to-one (seating to parking spaces) is less restrictive than the average place in California.

Wasn't it aimed as a punitive measure against future entrepreneurs and restaurateurs who would like to open in Carmel?

I wouldn't call it a punitive measure. No.

It would have been very expensive to open, however, under that law.

If the city tries to protect itself against overdevelopment in any direction, I think you will find that the Supreme Court has upheld cities in case after case, Petaluma being one of the most famous.

Would you compare the Petaluma plan to the restaurant ordinance?

Of course they are not comparable. What I am saying is that the Supreme Court has tended to support small cities trying to protect themselves from overdevelopment.

And you believe Carmel was in a position where restaurants were being overdeveloped?

I think we have an adequate number of restaurants and art galleries, gift shops – I think we have a plethora of many things in Carmel.

Those type of businesses do cater to a visitor, a tourist.

Not necessarily.

You think there are enough restaurants in Carmel to serve the tourist trade?

There are, yes, because there are many restaurants that are failing. For every business in Carmel that is advertised for sale in the paper, there are three or four, maybe 10, which are not advertised but which are changing hands. This tells me something about the health of the business community, because for every one that fails, there are always two or three people standing in the wings waiting to take their place thinking they can make it. Yet there always is the turnover.

In the last few years, there has been a tremendous turnover. If you look at the business license review records, the applications for new businesses is on-going, but there aren't that many new businesses. That means that some of them are failing.

Let me play the devil's advocate. Possibly those owners are fearful that the Carmel City Council may pass some punitive meaure, or some measure that would make it difficult to sell the restaurants. Couldn't the parking ratio law have hastened turnover in restaurants?

I rather think that this would increase the value. The measure, instead of being punitive, would tend to increase the value of the existing restaurants. I understand some of the restaurant owners were dancing a jig when we put this law through because they thought their businesses were that much more valuable. I don't think any of our actions are punitive. At least, that's not what's in my mind. What I'm trying to do is to protect the beautiful and unique ambiance of Carmel and whatever measures that we can take to do that I think are justified, because if you kill the golden goose that lays the golden egg, where would Carmel be?

The city property tax rate is relatively low in Carmel. They represent approximately 10 per cent of our city revenue. Is there a possibility that the property tax could be eliminated entirely or even the possibility that an inverse property tax, a rebate, could be given?

I question that there would be a rebate, but there is a very good chance that the taxes would be reduced by prudent spending. There are many ways that we can cut back on our budget regardless of whether we're faced with the Jarvis amendment or the Behr amendment.

Would you favor eliminating the property tax rate in Carmel?

I don't know whether it would be prudent to eliminate it. I think it could still be cut, but as far as total elimination, I don't feel we should go that far at this point.

What would be the danger of eliminating it?

It's a question of how much revenue and how many services the residents of the city are willing to pay for or be without, one of the two. But in the final analysis, the residents have to decide what they're willing to have and what sort of money they're willing to spend on the services of the city.

You said earlier that there are some things that could be cut. What are they?

I think we should make some cutbacks in capital outlay in the city. We have always bought very good equipment in the past. We have a good backlog of equipment, which I think was very intelligent on the city's part, buying equipment that wouldn't have to be used so soon, and this is something that we will not have to ask for funds for ... for sometime.

Do you think that the Public Works Department should be scaled down?

I think that's really a budget matter and we will be going into budget sessions very soon and rather than make a statement that might be prejudicial on the future budget, I would rather suggest that you attend budget sessions and see how we deal with it.

The budget sessions come after the election. That's why I'm asking what cutbacks you would favor.

Many cities are going with the budget idea of presenting two budgets, one if they're faced with the Jarvis amendment and one if they're not faced with the Jarvis amendment. My feeling is that if they think they can cut their budget to allow for the Jarvis amendment, then there must be things that could have been cut anyway. Carmel will not be terribly affected by the Jarvis amendment because only 10 per cent of our budget comes from property tax.

The challenger, Herrick

Is there a major issue in this campaign, or a group of issues?

There are no clear-cut, major issues that can be put into a few words. I've been going to the City Council meetings for the four years in which I've been actively connected with the leadership of the Carmel Citizens Committee.

I've also been going to most of the Planning Commission meetings during this time. About a year and a half ago, there was a change in the way in which council meetings were conducted. Also there seemed to be a considerable lack of understanding of how the government of the city of Carmel could be used effectively to preserve the values which we all have.

Did that happen to coincide with the emergence of the "Norberg majority" on the council?

It did.

And how does their view—the view of the majority—differ from yours in the approach to Carmel's problems?

I think their view of the problems of Carmel and my view of the problems of Carmel are really rather similar. There would be a difference in emphasis, it's true, but I think there's a good deal of similarity. There's a great deal of difference with what I feel to be the proper procedures. In my opinion, planning, zoning, granting use permits, licensing, giving design review clearance are the necessary ways in which the community shapes its character and maintains its character. I believe very strongly in these controls for Carmel, but I'm very much concerned when these tools are used as weapons. When they're used to strike against fancied enemies, then the tools are dulled and the whole procedure of using these controls becomes discredited.

This is something that is very hard to put into a few words, but is something that is very easy to understand if one has been at council and planning commission meetings in the last year and a half.

Could you give us one example?

One example which occurred just before the time the candidates filed — I think is very good. It had to do with the problem of the number of restaurants in Carmel, which is a very real problem for the people who own and manage restaurants. I'm sure that they would all agree that there are too many restaurants.

The word came to the Planning Commission — and it should be understood that five of the seven members of the Planning Commission have been appointed in the last year — that there are too many restaurants — do something about it.

What happened was this: the Planning Commission had been working on new conditions for use permits for restaurants with general liquor licenses. They had worked out something that was, in my opinion, quite proper.

All at once, an addition was made to the ordinance dealing with these use permits, which required new restaurants applying for use permits, having general liquor licenses, to provide one parking place for every four seats, or to pay one in-lieu parking fee.

This would mean that a restaurant with 32 seats would have to pay over $100,000 in an in-lieu parking fee, which meant, of course, that it as quite impossible for any new restaurant with a general liquor license to be established. The restaurants with use permits were not at all affected.

This came before the City Council. The city attorney gave his opinion that this would be thrown out if challenged in court on Constitutional grounds. It set up a special class of people aspiring to start restaurants and not having use permits and placed a very heavy — in fact an impossible — penalty on them.

It was proposed by two members of the Council that this be separated from the other ordinance. The three-member majority in the Council refused. They voted the whole measure through its first reading. Then came the time for filing.

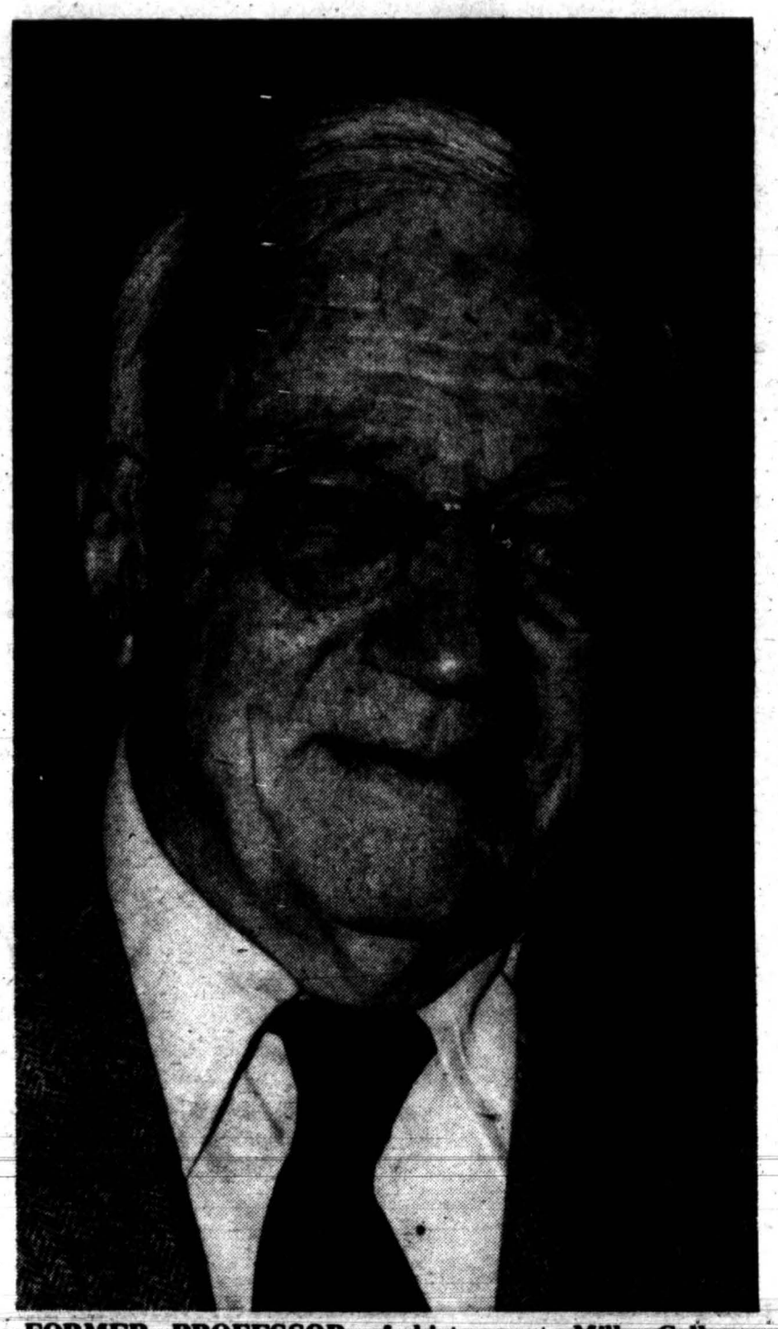
At the next Council meeting, the same three members who had voted not to separate it voted to separate it, but instead of putting this parking requirement on the table, where it really belonged, they referred it back to the Planning Commission here it is waiting, supposedly until after the election.

Do you think Carmel has a parking problem and if so, what, if anything, should we do about it?

Carmel has a parking problem — everyone understands this. To speak rather frankly, I don't believe there is any solution to any parking problem in any city in this country as long as cars are being produced in such quantity and as long as most people prefer to drive rather than to walk.

If a multi-level parking garage were built anywhere in Carmel it wouldn't really solve the parking problem; it would only place a very heavy debt on the citizens of Carmel.

The parking problem can be alleviated, but it can't be solved. In my opinion, there is a way to alleviate the parking problem and all the members of the City Council are of the same opinion. That is, to use the in-lieu parking funds that have accumulated over the years for another small parking lot comparable to that of the post office parking lot.



FORMER PROFESSOR of history at Mills College, Francis Herrick, 77, was born and raised in the Cleveland area. A graduate of Western Reserve University, where his father was a professor of biology, Herrick was named to Phi Beta Kappa. He was also a Rhodes Scholar. After receiving his PhD from Yale, he taught history at Mills. He later became executive secretary of the Western College Association and was a member of the commission responsible for the accreditation of colleges and universities in California and Hawaii. He became familiar with the Carmel area when he married the former Mariam White in 1930. The Herricks have lived here since 1959. He was president of the Carmel Citizens Committee for two years. The Herricks have two daughters and two grandchildren.

All of the members of the City Council have said that they approve of this, but the various things that have been brought up — the divisive issues — have caused this to be put aside.

I know that Mr. Anderson has been very interested in this, but there has been nothing that he could do about it as long as there is a majority of three controlling the direction in which the discussions of the Council went.

I could not promise, as only one member, to do this; nevertheless, I feel that it should be given priority.

Several years ago the city acquired what many people now consider to be a white elephant in the Flanders mansion and the surrounding property in the northeast portion of the city. What disposition should be made of Flanders mansion and the surrounding property?

The issue of the Flanders house — I wouldn't call it a mansion having been through it — it is a very large and was a very expensive house, but it has certain very definite peculiarities in its arrangement — this was the subject of a town meeting that was organized by the Carmel Citizens Committee.

At that town meeting, when the real issue was whether there were any public uses for the house or not, I made a statement to the effect that I thought it should be perfectly clear that the house should not be left empty. When it was left empty, there was damage due to some vandalism, some general deterioration as a result of leaks.

I also stated that I felt that no public use should be developed which could bring about an increase in traffic to and from the house which would be a genuine nuisance to the people who lived nearby.

I feel that if a public use develops — and I have seen no public use that is appropriate — the city should use the house for this purpose. I have no objection to having the city administrator live in the house, if he wishes to do so.

I felt that when Mr. Bradford Dow was the tenant in the house, he provided an arrangement which was very suitable as far as the city was concerned because he paid for all the necessary repairs, he did a great deal to improve the house and I believe that it was an arrangement of mutual advantage for both the city and Mr. Dow.

His lease is over; the council has made it perfectly clear that it will not renew his lease. It wants to find a public use. Until such a public use develops, I see no reason why the city administrator shouldn't live in it.

If there is no public use, if no one wishes to live in it, it ought not to stand empty. It would be better to sell the property and to use the money for some better public purpose.

Didn't our mayor, Gunnar Norberg, state at that very same meeting that "the city will never sell that property?"

He did, very definitely, and if Carmel's future were to be determined by Mr. Norberg, the house would never be sold.

There was a rather grand proposal for the creation of a recreational facility at Sunset Center which would include a swimming pool, gymnasium and so on. This was presented to the council and discussed by the council in the last couple of months. Then a questionnaire was sent to post office box holders. Now a much-scaled-down version is being studied at the direction of Mayor Norberg. Are you in favor of the creation of this recreational facility at Sunset Center? Do you think there is a need for it, and if you are in favor of it, how should it be financed?

At the time the questionnaire was sent out, there was something which I questioned and as a matter of fact I wrote in to the Cultural Commission my concern about the indication that this would be financed out of the hostelry tax and this was quite out of any reasonable assumption, because all the funds received from the hostelry tax are used for other purposes. If those funds were assigned to pay off the bonds for such a recreational center, money would have to be found elsewhere. Of course, the hostelry tax was used to pay off the Sunset Center bonds. They're nearly all paid off.

If the people of Carmel understood that the city would have to have a bond issue, a very considerable bond issue — at least $2.5 million — for such a recreational facility, and that the payment of interest and the retirement of this bond issue would come out of the general revenues, in fact, I don't believe that they would approve the bond issue. As a result, I see no purpose in trying to plan such an elaborate recreational facility which couldn't possibly receive approval.

As far as the scaled-down proposal, which seems to be basically a swimming pool, this obviously would be much less expensive. Nevertheless, a swimming pool is expensive to maintain.

I have a considerable question in my mind as to whether the people of Carmel really want to have a public swimming pool. But, if it is referred to the people in a bond issue, I see no reason why we shouldn't make the decision with regard to a swimming pool.

If there is an overriding issue, it seems to be the notion that the interests of the residents of Carmel — that is, the people who reside within the city limits — and the interests of the business community, are irrevocably opposed to each other. There are some people who think the interests are really intertwined. How do you feel about that, Mr. Herrick?

They're not, of course, irrevocably opposed to each other. I don't know about the word "intertwined." I would tend to say that these interests often diverge, but I don't believe that they should be allowed to diverge in people's minds so as to produce hostility between a party that calls itself residential and the people who are involved in Carmel business.

I am concerned and I think everyone is concerned by the fact that the people who reside in Carmel increasingly do their shopping outside of the city and that the shops in the city are increasingly dependent on customers who come from outside. But this is in the nature of things as they are in Carmel.

I don't believe that any attempt by city ordinance to reverse this is possible, but I do believe that the controls that are available through the Planning Commission and the City Council can be used in such a way that the residents of Carmel can feel secure in their very strong belief that Carmel shouldn't be developed into a resort center in which they can no longer live comfortably.

Now, this idea that an issue in this election is between residents and business seems to me quite apart from reality. All the candidates are what one might call residential candidates. It is true that one individual has a considerable business on Ocean Avenue, but he was brought up in Carmel, he lives in Carmel. No one should suppose that because of his business, he wishes to bring about a deterioration of the residential values of Carmel.

I don't think this is true of any of the candidates. I do feel, however, that it makes a great deal of difference for the future if a group of three candidates, proclaiming themselves, you might say, the sole defenders of residential interests, seek control of the City Council. And if, in seeking control of the City Council, they use these tools which the city has to control its own basic character, to strike out at business, the results can only be unfortunate, because most of the revenues that support our city government are

'Carmel will not be terribly affected by Jarvis initiative,' says Arnold

Let's assume that the Jarvis Initiative does fail and you have expressed a desire to try to lower the property tax rate. You've mentioned the possibility of scaling down capital outlay. What other areas of the budget could be cut back?

This is an extremely difficult problem because you are dealing with inflation, the natural cost of living increase, city employees are always sitting in on these budget sessions and they want a larger percentage of increase, and it's a very complicated problem to try to figure out whether you can cut. That's something I'm not prepared to make a declaration on at this point.

Do you favor or oppose the elective mayor issue on the ballot?

I generally favor it.

Would you explain why?

It seems to me it would be more responsive to the people. The process of electing the mayor by public vote would be a demonstration of more responsiveness to the people.

Opponents of the measure have stated that if it was a close race, with two popular people running for the same office, only one could win and the other would have no spot on the council.

That's one of the bad aspects. We would lose possibly one good man.

In November, a questionnaire on expansion at Sunset Center was circulated and the mention was of a $2.5 million outlay for an assortment of improvements there. Do you favor the entire package as it was presented in the questionnaire?

I've stated this publicly on several occasions, the committee made no recommendations. The ad hoc committee was named in response to a large public meeting at the Sunset School. I was named as the council representative to the committee. We were charged with a certain responsibility to carry out. We were asked to look into the possibility of the recreational facility. There was no way of knowing from the public whether this would be something that they wanted so the poll was circulated by the city. The responses to that poll were very meager, but they did give an indication that the gym part of the facility was not wanted, so that was summarily dropped. There was quite a response to the idea of a poll, so that possibility is still alive, but whether or not the voters will want it will have to be submitted to them just as the bonds were submitted in the choice of buying Sunset Center.

Do you feel a $2.5 million bond measure would pass?

I would be very much against that being put on the ballot. That's an enormous sum.

Would you use any of those facilities personally?

I think I would probably use the pool.

Do you have any idea what the final disposition of the Flanders mansion should be?

I am very much opposed to selling it or any part of the park. I think they can eventually find a municipal use for Flanders and I would be very much opposed to selling it until we can come up with that use.

Do you think that Carmel has a parking problem?

Well, I think it's had a parking problem for 40 years.

What can be done about it?

There is no real ultimate solution to it. We're always going to be faced with a parking problem because of our evergrowing renown as a beautiful community.

What do you think of Howard Brunn's proposal for a downtown mall along Ocean between Junipero and Monte Verde? Brunn has an adjunct project where people would park their cars outside the area and then ride in on a trolley.

I am not in favor of the mall. I have never been in favor of a mall primarily because it will only force cars into the residential areas. The cars that Ocean Avenue absorbs now would be pushed out into the residential area and therefore I would be very much opposed to it.

Gasper Cardinale, of the Carmel Business Association, has suggested an underground garage under Devendorf Park. Can you comment on that?

I don't know how it could be funded. That would be a terribly expensive thing to do, if the business community wanted to enter into the city with some sort of a formation of a parking district that might be a possibility. My feeling about parking structures is that they don't solve the problem. They will be filled up and there will be more cars anyway.

What accomplishments have you made in the last two years that you are particularly proud of?

If I did one thing during my tenure, it would be that I stopped a direct access into the heart of Carmel when they wanted to put a 10-foot-wide bridge across the Flanders Canyon. It would have been an extension of Mountain View. It was a vehicular bridge. When I first came on the council, I was asked to consider three proposals. All three were for a vehicular bridge across that canyon which would have connected with Hatton Canyon, which would have then been a direct access from Highway 1 to the heart of Carmel.

One of the proposals was for an earth-filled bridge which would have disturbed the water flow and an infinite number of things in that canyon. I researched the General Plan very thoroughly and came up with quite a number of places where the canyon was protected.

You're positive you stopped a vehicular bridge from being built?

I would say I turned the thinking away from it toward a pedestrian bridge and I'm very proud of having done that.

The only intent on the bridge was to have cars going across it?

Yes. It was a vehicular bridge.

There was no room for a foot trail?

It was a 10-foot vehicular bridge. Two cars could pass. If I am reelected I would like to attack the problem of large oppressive houses being built in neighborhoods of small houses. There isn't a single neighborhood in Carmel that doesn't have within the radius of a few blocks a house that everyone is appalled at because of its size and bulk, the sheer mass of it. This is due in part to the increased land values. People feel that they need to justify the expense of the land by building a huge house. This is gradually changing the character of Carmel.

Was the recent battle over putting the preamble to the Zoning Code in a frame and displaying it prominently in the City Council chambers worth the acrimony and the divisive effect on the community that it produced?

In the first place, the City Council enlarged the problem way out of proportion. I never at any time proposed a 15- or 18-foot-long sign that had routed letters gold painted. I never proposed such a sign. I proposed something that would be in the same relation as a senator or a congressman putting the Declaration of Independence up on his wall as part of our heritage. Something we should be proud of and something we should pay respect to. It was not my fault that it got blown out of porportion. Other members of the council chose to do so. It shouldn't create such heat. This is part of our code. Why should it have engendered such opposition?

Since this is part of our code and has been since 1929, I feel there should be no objection to it at all. If the business community, represented by Mr. Hughes, chooses to feel that this is something that should not be here, they have the responsibility of so stating, which they didn't and they are more contributive to the schism, if any has developed, than the proposal in the first place because this is part of our heritage and it is part of our building code.

Herrick: 'City budgets only change one way'

derived from the business district. This is a fact that must be understood; it's a fact to which I do not close my eyes and I do not think the City Council should ever ignore it in working out its policies.

Are there any major problems facing the city that have gone unaddressed in the last year and a half, in your opinion, because of the squabbling in the council?

I would not say that these major problems have gone unaddressed, but so often they have been pushed aside.

I think that one of the major problems is the expense of our city government. I'm not indicating that it is at all possible to reduce the city budget. City budgets are not like that. They can change in only one direction and that is up. But it is true that it was this divided Council that had to face a city budget for which they had not really been prepared.

All sorts of commitments were made — commitments to things that seemed to be good for the city — but would require expenditures in the next budgetary year. These expenditures had to be made and when the budget was put together there was no way to escape the fact that it represented the largest increase that had ever been made. For the supplementary budget in September, it was an increase of about 20 per cent — which is very, very different from the inflation rate we now seem to regard as normal.

More than that, the total amount of the increase was nearly half a million dollars. Now, this is not going to bear upon the residents, because at the same time the tax rate was somewhat reduced. The tax rate in Carmel is very low. All this additional expenditure will really come from the financial success of the businesses in the commercial zone.

I believe that it will come. Nevertheless, I feel that problem of an increasing budget, which was not addressed until too late, was the most important single issue that was set aside as a result of these divisive issues being put before the Council and the squabbling that they caused.

Do you have any opinion about whether the mayor ought to be elected or appointed by his fellow councilmen?

I think it is generally known why Proposition A is on the ballot and I don't think I want to go into it.

Of course, Carmel has a very simple form of city government. It is a form that is really older than the Constitution of the United States. It doesn't include the separation of the powers into executive and legislative powers that we find in our Constitution. The City Council is composed of five individuals. No one is really significantly more important than the others, although one is elected mayor.

The principal function of the mayor is to preside at City Council meetings. It seems to me highly appropriate that the Council members should decide who should preside and that this decision should not be made by a vote that is quite separate from a vote for Council members.

I don't regard it as a matter of very great importance, but, nevertheless, it seems to me that it has no utility and that an issue put on the ballot very largely because of the ambitions of one person shouldn't be regarded as either an advance in the direction of more democracy or necessarily as a very significant complication of our existing good relations.

Would that one person be our present mayor, Gunnar Norberg?

He was quite definite about wanting this. This came at a time when he had no expectation of being elected by the Council. This is one of the ironies of our present election.

There has been some concern about something you mentioned earlier -- the structure and the function of the city Planning Commission. What do you think is the proper relationship of the City Council and individual members of the Council to the Planning Commission, and what do you think the prospects are for orderly functioning of government with the existing Planning Commission?

The Planning Commission is, next to the City Council, the most important body in our city government. As a result, I believe very strongly that all the members of the Planning Commission should be citizens of Carmel. This has not been true until recently, but I believe that the present restriction of membership of the Planning Commission to residents of Carmel is very important and should be maintained because it has certain quasi-judicial functions as well as the general function of planning.

It has happened that five of the seven members have been appointed within the past year. The members of the Planning Commission are appointed by mayor and they are then confirmed by the City Council. Since there has been, one might say, an organized majority of three in the City Council, all the appointments that the mayor has made to the Planning Commission are assured ultimate confirmation.

These appointments have changed the character of the Planning Commission a great deal. Some of the appointees have been quite new to the city. They brought good will, good intentions; they brought ability, but they haven't brought experience.

Some of the appointments made recently have brought to the Planning Commission people who have fine ideas but quite hazy ideas about what should be done. The result is that many of the discussions in the Planning Commission have gone on without any effective leadership, since the newly appointed members have often paid no attention to the experienced chairman.

This has resulted in ordinances being drawn in the Planning Commission which are very poorly drawn, which need revision, and this central part of the city government is one which has not been operating as efficiently as it should.

I am very much concerned, also, about the relations between the Planning Commission and the City Council. It should be understood quite clearly that it is the City Council that sets policy. Some of the newly appointed members of the Planning Commission have almost assumed that their appointment gave them the right to develop policies of their own.

This is not at all proper. At the same time, I feel that once policy has been set, the Planning Commission should be kept free of any interference by individual members of the City Council. I feel it is quite improper for an individual member of the City Council to go to a Planning Commission and state views before it. Policy should be set at Council meetings; the work of the Planning Commission should not be subject to interference by individual Council members.

Howard Brunn: 'Taste can't be legislated -- it's up to the landlord'

You are a businessman and you have prospered by operating, buying and selling many retail businesses – some of which were tourist oriented. Do you think you can represent both the interests of the residents and the business people in Carmel?

Sure. I'm president of the Carmel Bay Co., and it is visitor-oriented as much as many other businesses are in Carmel. The schism, or whatever it is being referred to, between the business and the residential communities is actually almost mythical.

If they would both address themselves to what Carmel is really all about, they have the same common goals. Business people should have the same common goals as residents. That is, maintaining the quality of life that brought us here in the first place.

This can be done through having businesses that are unique -- oriented not to chain or outside big-business interests, but rather to locally-owned smaller businesses that try to maintain a quality that will return Ocean Avenue to being one of the really great retail streets in the United States. It is fast becoming a Santa Cruz or Coney Island.

Do you think that you could be a kind of peacemaker, one who could make the compromises necessary so that the business and residential groups could coexist?

Well, we're going to coexist. I think it's very childish to fight and I think some of this newspaper's editorials along this line have been a little childish, too.

You say Carmel is becoming a Coney Island. What evidence do you have that that is happening?

Specifically, I guess the most recent horrible example is the old hardware store location where a nice, resident-oriented business has been replaced by what, in my opinion, is quite a bit of ticky-tacky. This is a danger that we face. Big was a danger, now small is becoming a danger. Some people are taking large locations and dividing them up and renting them out piecemeal to various people creating a very undesirable image for the city.

How would you encourage a "quality" type of retail operation on Ocean Avenue?

Taste cannot be legislated. The landlord has a good deal of control, probably most and ultimate control over what goes in his location. If a landlord is sensitive to the town, he will not always take the "highest and best" use. Highest and best is not always the person who can pay the highest square-footage rent today.

I believe if the landlords would take a long look at what's happening to their street and their town, they could upgrade by attempting to put people in their locations who are not just tourist oriented.

Are you saying that local people who are sensitive to the village character and own property on Ocean Avenue should be responsible, in part, for the quality of retail operation there?

Exactly.

Why, then, are some ticky-tacky shops going in?

I think it is very simple: greed and avarice.

On the part of whom?

Primarily the landlords. I don't mean to say all landlords fall into this category. Some are very sensitive and do a really wonderful job of merchandising their space so it fits the image of the village. Others are not.

But wouldn't you be powerless as a city councilman to maintain a high standard of retailing on Ocean Avenue?

As a city councilman, I don't think I would be powerless. You can't legislate taste, as I said, but you can legislate size, setback, open space, square footage and other things, some of which limit the types of business in the town. We're moving in this direction, I think.

Do you think it would be legal to have some type of zoning along Ocean Avenue that would permit only certain types of merchandise to be sold?

I think it is possible that legislation can be drafted that would give direction to certain types of businesses such as art galleries. I understand we now have 99 of them. Houston, Tex., boasts that they have 100. If an attempt were made to bring back some businesses that are more oriented to the people who live in the village, it would probably have to be done with some sort of subsidy.

What makes one store residentially oriented and the other not? What type of store is not residentially oriented?

That's very simply a store that caters primarily or strictly to the tourist. And the store that just caters to the daytime tourist. He is the person who is only here for a matter of hours and jumps off a bus and runs up and down Ocean Avenue, buys an Orange Julius, gets down to the next block and throws it on the sidewalk. Maybe he wants to buy a T-shirt that says something funny, hops back on the bus and splits. These are very real dollars and some people are going after them.

You wouldn't consider your stores tourist oriented?

It's hard to measure what portion of our business is tourist oriented. We certainly couldn't succeed without the visitors. I like to call them visitors. I think we cater more to the people who are here on a longer-term basis -- at least overnight. We don't cater to the daytime tourist, frankly, and when the tour buses got off Ocean Avenue, it was a real blessing for us because it was like a destruction derby when those people would come in.

At the recent forum sponsored by the Carmel Citizens Committee, you said some part of Ocean Avenue should be converted into a mall. Could you explain what you have in mind?

I like the concept of Ocean Avenue, from Junipero to Monte Verde, being primarily a pedestrian mall. Obviously, access has to be there for emergency vehicles and delivery arrangements to the shops have to be provided.

There could be cross streets, there would have to be cross streets; probably one way. Perhaps at Mission, perhaps San Carlos, Dolores, Lincoln, Monte Verde or some combination. This just couldn't happen all by itself. It should be part of a general plan which I think the city is long overdue in preparing.

WHY CARMEL NEEDS

DOROTHEA ROBERTS

ON THE CITY COUNCIL

- 55-year resident of Carmel
- 12 years serving on planning commission. Current Chairman.
- 16 years conducted and operated own business in Carmel.
- She is aware of the needs in Carmel and will bring to the City Council the practical common sense that will stress harmony, more prudent spending of taxpayers money and prompt attention to the many pressing matters that have been neglected.

Vote For Dorothea Roberts ☒
City Council, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Who would pay for this conversion of Ocean Avenue?

I think its fundable, but I don't have a ready answer to that because I'm not conversant enough with the city finances and sources of revenue at this time. If the majority of the people of Carmel want it, it could be funded.

Do you have any idea about what it would cost?

No idea at all. That's why the study needs to be done.

What about the parking spaces that would be lost?

This is the most frequently asked question. Again, it's a function of long-range planning. I believe eventually most of the cars are going to have to go outside of the city and the people, particularly the people who work in the city, would have to come into town on some sort of trolley, tram or electric bus. It is being done successfully in many other areas.

For instance?

Yosemite, Williamsburg (Va.). There's a wonderful town that I hope to visit this year in France where they simply give you a key to a vehicle, you use it and then you leave it and the next person comes along and uses it and then leaves it. The city picks up all the vehicles at night, puts them to bed, charges them up and the next morning puts them out in strategic places.

But where would people park their cars to get to the trolley?

I think the city may have dropped the ball when they neglected to pursue the strip of land owned by the state of California on Highway 1 and Rio Road. Another possibility is a similar strip of land up where Carpenter and Highway 1 join.

I have no objection to underground parking within the city limits. My objection is to building any parking structure that looms up above the ground within the city limits. I think in the next five years, opportunities will emerge for more parking within the city limits.

On what do you base that prediction?

Certain people have led me to believe that such pieces of land could become available.

Again talking about the mall, what effects would it have on business on Ocean Avenue?

I wouldn't be suggesting it if I thought it was going to hurt businesses. It could return to the town some of the charm it has lost and codify it for the future.

Codify it?

In terms of, say, beauty and ... It would change and return the business district a little bit to what it was some years ago without penalizing business interests. The quality of visitor we seek would be drawn to this street even more than they are now. I'm afraid in the summer we so often hear "Well, I've quit coming to Carmel. I can't move. I can't breathe. I can't park my car."

What about the deliveries to the stores – how would that problem be resolved?

It's a manageable problem. I'm still serving on a committee appointed by the mayor to study this problem and we had a hearing at City Hall. A number of business people turned out. They were very negative about limiting deliveries to certain hours. Instead of trying to solve the problem, it appears to me most of them were just there to kill the idea.

It is going to be difficult to go ahead with that kind of thinking unless a responsible section of the business people will sit down and try to solve it productively.

Would the mall put a kink in delivery schedules?

I think it might solve a lot of the problems. Deliveries would have to be made at specific times. You wouldn't have big trucks in the middle of the town.

So it would force a solution in your opinion?

It would indeed.

Do you think steps should be taken to limit the number of tourists who are allowed in Carmel?

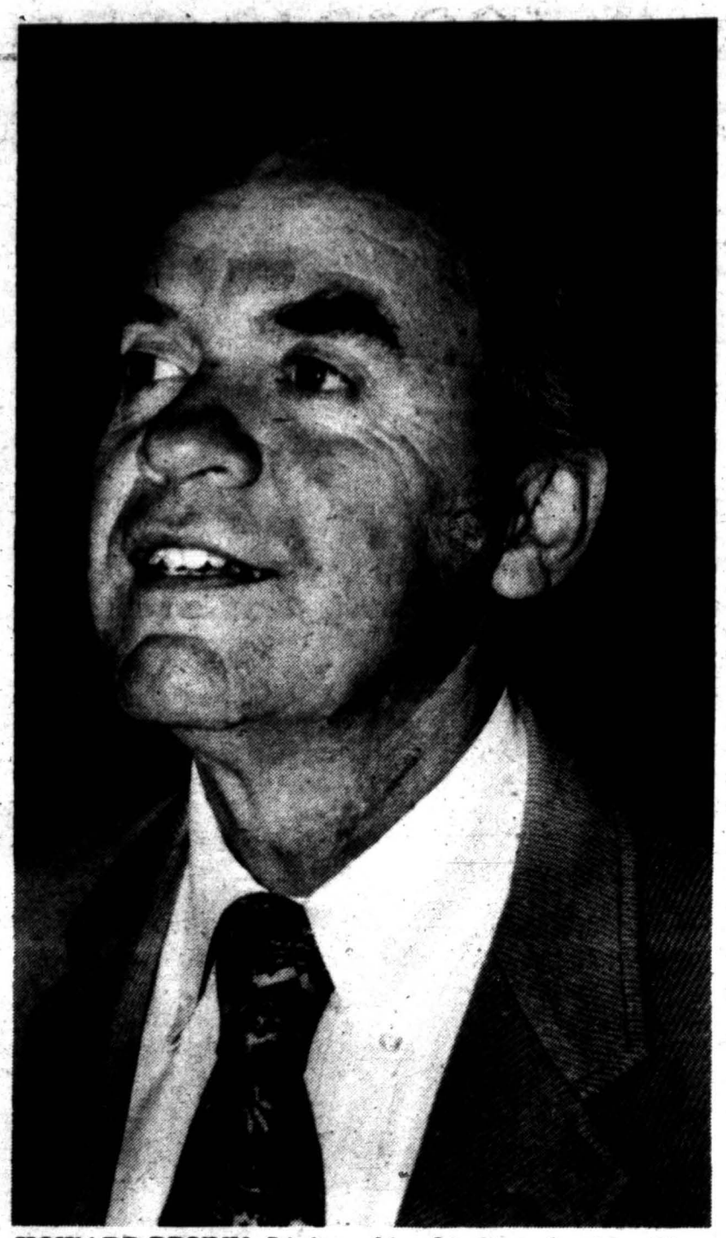
I don't imagine you can legally limit the number of people that use your streets.

Do you have a way of controlling the type of person who comes only for a day and leaves? Is there any tool the City Council could use?

That's a tough one. As we upgrade and seek a taste level in the town, in a sense it would attract a certain visitor more than someone who was just here to whiz through. I call them the cut and run tourist.

It seems that there's been several complaints from people who point out how some merchants are here only to make a buck off Carmel's character and charm yet some of those same people who make that accusation themselves are well-heeled and have made money. Isn't it hypocritical to point a finger at someone who's trying to make a dollar in Carmel if you've already made your money and are relatively well-off?

That's a long one. I think it behooves anyone doing business in Carmel to try to take a long look at the things that make that business successful. People don't come here just to shop in our stores. They come here for another reason. They come here for a certain ambiance, a certain charm, a certain quality that we're in danger of losing and in my opinion, we have lost some of. So a long look by a business person must include trying to upgrade the business life of the town.



HOWARD BRUNN, 54, is seeking his first elective office. His family moved here in 1926 from San Francisco and he has lived in Carmel the majority of the time since then. Brunn owns the Carmel Bay Co. and has a part interest in Raffles, in the Carmel Plaza. He serves on the boards of directors of Talbott Inc., the necktie manufacturing firm, and the Monterey Jazz Festival. He also was a founder of OLAF, a group that successfully opposed development on the Odello artichoke fields, and Old Carmel, the Carmel residents' lobby. He has three daughters and two sons.

Would that upgrading benefit the residents?

Yes, it will. Most of the residents once were visitors. And the things that they moved here to enjoy are fast disappearing. They're upset. They don't come uptown. They stay home on weekends.

Why?

Very often because they say they can't stand the traffic, the amount of people, pollution and noise. If we could slow the town down a little bit, I think the residents would benefit.

And Ocean Avenue is the focus of all that weekend activity. Therefore, you would concentrate on rectifying the problem there?

Ocean Avenue is the heart of the business district and I think that's where the energy towards upgrading should be focused.

Speaking again of residents, what about the proposal to enlarge Sunset Center for a recreational facility with varied activities. There was a questionnaire sent out by the city in November and the figure of $2.5 million was mentioned. Is that facility something the residents of Carmel want or need?

I think the residents of Carmel should answer that question. If any significant amount of money is to be spent, there should be a ballot measure and it should be put to the residents just as the library issue was put before the residents. I think today in Carmel the voice of the residents is being heard more than ever before and wants to be heard.

So what are you hearing? Are you hearing that they want a $2.5 million recreational facility?

No. They don't want a $2.5 million facility. What I'm hearing is they don't want a facility that will serve other than the residents primarily. They might want a swimming pool; they might want a Jacuzzi facility. I think it's worth further study and input.

Would you personally use the facilities that were mentioned in the questionnaire?

I might use a swimming pool. Young people would use a swimming pool, I think. It is a facility that could be shared by younger people and older people. And it could be controlled as to residential use.

How would you suggest it be financed?

That's a good question. I don't know. I don't know. I haven't studied it.

Do you think there's a possibility Carmel could eliminate the property tax in this town?

Yes, I think we could. I think that was shown. What is it? Only 50 cents. I think we could if we wanted to.

Would you do that if you are elected?

If it seemed to be the fiscally sound thing to do. I don't know. If I get on the City Council I certainly will have an answer. Right now, I really haven't studied in depth. I've read the Haskins and Sells report. I've read the budget. I can see a lot of areas that need attention but I can't specifically address myself to that because I'd like to be able to speak with full knowledge.

You couldn't say give a yes or no on whether you would vote to eliminate the property tax?

I'd say definitely yes, as I said, if it seems to be the sound fiscal move at the time. I just couldn't say right now because I'm not well enough informed.

Everyone's been trying to figure out the proper use for the Flanders mansion. Do you have any particular idea of how that mansion could be used come August?

I think the city is capable of coming up with a good use for it. I have no specific idea. Four or five valid ones have been mentioned. I would hope the city will never sell that property or again entertain the idea of selling that property.

Speaking of the police, on Thursday night you also said you thought the billy clubs and the shotguns that the police carry were a bit too intimidating.

Yes, I really feel that the police could move in the direction of lower-powered cars that are more cost and energy effective; a less militant posture by getting rid of those shotguns and riot guns that they carry around in the cars. Perhaps in the daytime, inasmuch as statistics on major crime were very good, we have very little of it, they could leave their guns in the station and go get them if they're needed. I'd like to see the officers out of their cars directing traffic during the busy weekends. Washington's Birthday weekend was a good example.

Do you think that they should wear the conventional uniform or ones that look different?

We could take a whole look at redesigning the uniforms, possibly. Maybe have a competition. We have some wonderfully talented designers. I wouldn't go as far as to want to take them out of uniforms. I think they should be easily identifiable as peace officers.

I think we should have a highly trained police force, and to do that we have to have a well-paid police force.

Is it well paid now?

Somewhat comparable to other cities, somewhat lower than some on the Peninsula, I'm told by the chief. Through atrition, as we hire new officers, I think we should reach out to people who have degrees in police science.

With your talk about shotguns and billy clubs, I'm wondering if this can be construed as criticism of the department? Are you criticizing the department?

No. It's not wise to criticize the police when you live in the city.

You're not dissatisfied with the kind of police service Carmel gets now.

To the extent of some of the things I've mentioned. I'm not happy with the speed they drive the high-powered cars to emergency calls. I'm not happy with the fact that they can't seem to cope -- or don't seem to try to cope – with the traffic situation on busy weekends. I'm not at all happy when I see a couple of police cars arrive on a silent alarm and they jump out of the cars carrying those shotguns. Someday, someone is going to get killed and I don't think it's going to be someone committing a crime.

I think Carmel has the wonderful opportunity, being a town with a very low major crime rate, to lead the way in innovative law enforcement.

Do you think there's a good working relationship between the City Council and the Planning Commission?

There appears to be a working relationship between the planning commission and the City Council. After the election, it will depend a lot on who gets elected whether this same relationship, a similar relationship or a different relationship will emerge.

Do you have an opinion as to whether the mayor should be elected by the voters or appointed by the City Council? That's one issue the voters will be asked to decide next Tuesday.

I don't think it's a very important issue. I personally am going to vote to leave it the way it is. It seems to have worked for this small a village; with one notable exception, it's worked just fine. The notable exception was when Gunnar Norberg received the majority of the popular vote but did not get named mayor. Other than that, it seems to have worked.

Everyone seems to complain about problems with parking. Does Carmel have a parking problem?

Carmel does not have as much of a parking problem as is voiced. People come to Carmel; they expect to park either directly or within a block of where they want to go. You don't expect to do that in San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Jose -- almost anywhere else you go you're ready, willing and able to park your car, pay to have it parked and walk some number of blocks.

In Carmel, we're used to parking right in front of where we work or want to go. We've trained our visitors to be that way, also. So, yes, we can't say we don't have a problem when you see people lined up from Highway 1 to the foot of Ocean Avenue, as was the case last weekend.

Mike Brown: 'It's not enough to just say there is a problem'

You claim credit for cleaning up the tour bus problem in Carmel, yet one of your early proposals would have sent the buses down Ocean Avenue, across Scenic and up 13th Street. Wouldn't that have been worse than the problem that the proposal attempted to solve and the plan that finally was adopted?

Oh, no question about it. But the thing is, when I first proposed this, in fact I'll get out the folder if you like. I keep history and folders for everything. This is the master file.

MIKE BROWN, 36, was first elected to the Carmel City Council in 1974. He moved here with his mother 25 years ago following the death of his father, a businessman from Seattle, Wash. He is a business manager with Harris Management Co., a Monterey-based firm that serves its clients with an array of corporate services such as tax and accounting assistance. He is a bachelor.

I've introduced 55 separate pieces of legislation. Here, this is the history of tour buses and . . .

You're not answering my question. Why did you propose that route?

Back in 1975, as I recall, when I first proposed that something be done about tour buses, the council was not receptive to it. It was a case where you can go in and say to your council members "This is what I want" and you come in with something very stiff, but you're not going to get it unless you are willing to work with the other four members. So, quite frankly, what I was proposing was something that would at least get something done. In other words, the way it was in those days was that tour buses were just running all over the place and so what I did was I came in with the map. I had them going down Ocean Avenue, I had them going down Scenic, I had them going up and down San Carlos and Junipero, all the way. Now, what I was trying to do was to get them out of most of the residential area of Carmel.

It was a first step; I saw that as a first step. In those days, not only was nothing being done, but my fellow council members and city staff, quite frankly, were saying there was no problem.

I'll give you an interesting situation. I'll never forget being in the finance director's office one day. We were sitting there talking and he said, "Mike, I don't know why you're concerned about the tour buses. There's no problem." He says, "I haven't seen a bus drive by here. I don't know why you're so concerned about it." I swear to you — just as he was telling me that — a bus pulled right out in front of City Hall, a tour bus. He and I laughed our heads off about it, it was sort of funny.

You were trying to prompt some action?

Right. Let's get some action going here. And I could tell by the feedback I was getting from my fellow council members that there was no problem and I felt there was. So that's where I started from. In those days, I intended not only that we would pass this ordinance, but I intended to keep coming back and whittle away at those streets. Does that answer your question?

Are you satisfied with the existing route even though it isn't the one you originally proposed?

Oh, much happier. Sure, because what I originally proposed I was not 100 per cent in favor of. I wanted to make it stiffer in those days, but you have to work with four other people, you see.

Why did you even specify a route if you only wanted to prompt action?

Because I tend to approach things in a manner where it's not enough to just say there's a problem, but also try to offer some solutions. I was simply trying to get something going.

You surprised a lot of people by declaring that many upstairs apartments in the business district were being converted to commercial use. The city records showed that there have been many more apartments constructed in the past years. In fact, there was a net gain in apartments in that area. Weren't you shooting from the hip without accurate information when you made that statement?

No, not at all, because one can look at it in the light of shooting from the hip. I recognize there is a lot of construction going on in our commercial district and a lot of this construction has had second-level apartments there, so one could say we have had an increase in second-level apartments, but what we have had is an increase in construction. It was those second-floor apartments that have existed for many, many years that I was focusing in on and directing my attention towards. Those are the ones we are losing. The ones along Dolores Street. I did spell out at that time, when I first brought this proposal up, the specific streets.

There were streets where we had had second-floor apartments for many, many, many years and they were going. An example: on the corner of Dolores and Seventh, on the northeast corner, there was a proposal to take out a number of apartments where there were older people living who had lived there for many, many years. They were to be wiped out for another restaurant.

As I sat there at the Planning Commission meetings, the party who wished to do this, there was absolutely no empathy, no feeling, no understanding for older people who have lived in our commercial district and have lived there for many years and are not about to be squeezed out.

Wasn't that an isolated incident?

No, no, no. You go down Dolores Street and there are many other instances where this is going on. There are many apartments that are still there, but I'm simply saying let's act on this now that we are concerned. At the time I proposed this, you listen to the tapes, I wasn't saying they were all going. I was saying let's get moving now, let's not wait until it is too late. This is what has irritated me and upset me — that there is too much of this "Oh my God, look what's happened. Now let's act." I'm simply trying to get the horse back in front of the cart. Certainly some of the things I have proposed have been controversial and some have been highly acceptable, but in any case, I'm just trying to get the horse in front of the cart.

You know, the other thing I was trying to bring up was that the success of our community, much of it is based on the fact that when people walk up and down the business district in Carmel they can still see that there are residents. There is something very charming and unique about that. That within your own commercially zoned area, you have people living. It is their home, and many of those residents are senior citizens and people who do not have cars. In turn, in residential areas, you will find businesses. There's the Golden Bough theater, there are doctors, there are people who have businesses in the residential areas. So what I'm trying to share here is that if you take Carmel as a whole, you can't say, "Here's the business district. It is just business and nothing else. And this is residential and nothing else."

How permissive would you be in letting businesses move into the residential districts?

I'm not encouraging that. I'm not encouraging that at all. I'm simply saying that it already exists — that we have motels already there. We already have a theater in the residential areas.

I'm damn proud of that commercial district. But if we are not careful, we could destroy it.

At the Feb. 14 meeting of the City Council, you stated that you attend Planning Commission meetings, but that you don't speak at those meetings. Some members of the Planning Commission have said that you do, in fact, speak at the meetings. Which version is true?

Well, okay, I've been at Planning Commission meetings and I have been asked a question and I will introduce things — something that was sent to the Planning Commission that I initiated at the council level. The glass recycling thing was one, when I proposed that the city of Carmel establish glass recycling, which later developed into a Peninsula-wide glass recycling program. I went to not only the Planning Commission, but the Cultural Commission, too. And I did so to share what I had in mind.

I attend the Planning Commission meetings primarily to be aware and understand what happened at the Planning Commission level, what facts were presented and so when I'm at the City Council meeting, I feel like I'm a hell of a lot better informed than if I simply sit there and read the minutes.

There are some who would say, however, that by participating in the Planning Commission deliberations, you are less impartial on matters passed up to the council from the Planning Commission.

It's sort of awkward here because I'm just trying to be informed as to what the heck is going on. It's simply a case of trying to be informed. You said something earlier — let me delve into it. You said something is passed up to the City Council. Honestly, I try to look at things on a horizontal plane rather than a vertical plane.

Would you encourage other councilmen to go to Planning Commission meetings?

Very much, very much. I've seen other councilmen there. Andy (Anderson) and Helen (Arnold) and Gunnar (Norberg), sometimes. David (Hughes) I don't think has been to any that I know of since his own Planning Commission term.

Did you say at that Feb. 14 meeting that you don't speak at Planning Commission meetings?

I may have. If it's something I'm introducing, . . . let me step back for a minute.

We earlier talked about tour buses. I initially introduced the idea of doing something about tour buses and was told, "Well, we couldn't do anything."

I'd go to a Planning Commission meeting to see that after a proposal goes through God knows how many bodies that what the Planning Commission finally gets may not be what I was suggesting.

Do you think the planning staff interferes in the communication between the City Council and the Planning Commission?

No. I don't say that it's interference. I cannot accept that there would be intentional interference. Each of us hears things in different manners and interprets things in different manners, so . . .

What is the ideal relationship between the Planning Commission and the City Council?

I'd like to see more study sessions. We've had one and I would hope there will be more of that. I would like to see maybe every three months the Planning Commission and the City Council sit down and discuss back and forth different things. Many of our own planning commissioners do not attend our own City Council meetings. By sitting down together, I think that could be very helpful. But there's the Cultural Commission, the Forestry Commission, a lot of other boards.

Since the tour bus law was enacted, do you believe the crush of tourism in Carmel has been minimized so the residents are no longer being disturbed by tourists?

I think the people of Carmel like to look at the town as a quality community, not a quantity community. What I think we are looking for are visitors who will stay overnight, go to our restaurants, visit our fine shops. But it is the "one-day warrior" who comes into the community, buys an ice cream cone, walks a block and tosses it on the street. That kind of activity, I think, is a concern of the people. The tour buses represented pulling that type of activity into the community. Wherever people come from, when they come to Carmel, I believe they like to think to a degree that they discovered this community.

CARMEL RESIDENTS NEED

Francis Herrick

ON THE CITY COUNCIL

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ELECTION -- MARCH 7, 1978

FRANCIS HERRICK, candidate for a two-year term on the Carmel City Council, has represented the Carmel Citizens Committee at Council meetings for the past four years, and has followed the work of the Planning Commission with care. He is well informed about city problems, and has considered carefully the issues that come before the City Council.

FRANCIS HERRICK, as an owner of residential property, faced a sharp increase in his taxes in 1976 like all other Carmel property owners, both residential and commercial. He knows that the 1978 City budget is by far the highest in the history of Carmel, and he will do his utmost to keep City costs at a reasonable level.

FRANCIS HERRICK understands that good intentions must be ballasted with good sense to keep our City on its proper course. He knows that City ordinances must be constructive, not punitive, and that they must be so carefully prepared that their legality will not be challenged in court.

FRANCIS HERRICK is fair, informed and free to serve Carmel.

We urge the citizens of Carmel to vote for FRANCIS HERRICK on March 7.

Dorothea Roberts: 'Our biggest problem is our General Plan'

One of the issues that has emerged in this election is the relationship of the Planning Commission to the City Council and even to some of the individual members of the council and their relationship to the Planning Commission. As Planning Commission chairman, would you give us your views on what you think the proper relationship ought to be?

That's a very difficult question because we all should be interviewed and picked only for our qualifications.

In the past, commissions have been selected this way. I've been on the Planning Commission 12 years; we've picked architects because of their background. There's also been a real estate man because of his background of fairness. We've had a cross-section on the Planning Commission.

Right now, it's a little different situation. I don't think they've been selected with the thought of what their background is in planning or what they're capable of offering to the city.

What were the criteria that were used then?

I don't know. I can't tell you because there are five new members and the only one that I'm sure probably was picked in place of an architect was Robert Stevenson.

I can't imagine why a doctor would be picked who does not have the time to give to study sessions ... it's hard for him even to be there on time for regular sessions.

Has he ever attended any study sessions?

Yes, but he's missed several, too. He's probably great in his field but I haven't found any qualifications in the planning field.

Don't you think that any person who is reasonably bright and who has an interest in the city with a willingness to spend the time could serve as a planning commissioner?

No, I do not. It goes further than that. I think I was on the commission for six months before I really came out with strong ideas. I had to listen. I read, and I learned.

This last group of appointees has come on talking.

Have you felt there has been any unfair or undue interference from certain members of the City Council during your deliberations?

Absolutely. In fact, I told them that I could not recognize them any longer. Although we value the information offered by residents who tell us what they think on issues and on public hearings, it got to be where the council members -- there are two of them particularly that come and try to influence the Planning Commission -- I think that's wrong.

Would that be Mr. Brown and Mrs. Arnold?

Yes.

What do you think is the major problem facing Carmel?

The biggest problem we have is our General Plan. All of us who run a home or a business have a plan and we work within this plan. The city has ignored its General Plan. It needs to be updated.

We know that we have a traffic problem in Carmel; we know that it's been a problem for many years. It's much worse than it used to be. It will never be completely solved, but we should be making an effort to pick up little parcels that can be hidden in and around our business district.

We need a mini-bus throughout our city that would pass every home. It was all worked out beautifully so that we could ride into town. It would pass within every house every hour and in some cases every half hour ... within two blocks of every house in Carmel.

We also have to face the problem of getting the workers who come to town off the streets. They're parking in the residential area. We must do something about this.

Is it true that if you created more parking spaces all you would do is bring in more people?

No, because I think there are ways to handle it. More people are going to come anyway. I mean, Carmel has been "found." We're not going back 30 years — we're not going back 50 years.

To think of making Ocean Avenue into a mall, which was brought up the other day - the Planning Commission has made real studies of it.

We found out that Sixth Street and Seventh Street are not adequate to take one-way traffic. When you propose a mall, and you're turning the town into one-way traffic, to circle it, you'd better look at the studies before making such proposals.

There's another thing we cannot do ... I do not think it's right to say, "Park them out of town, down at the mouth of the Valley, park them someplace." Carmel must face its own problems. We have a city; we have our city limits; we've got to solve them within our city limits.

Do you feel that there is a real division between the residents and the businessmen in Carmel?

There never has been before. This has been created by this new council. There has been always a meeting ground and that's exactly what the preamble means. It doesn't mean that they're separated. Our present mayor is trying to separate business from the residents. It has never been thought to be that way.

The residential character they talk about is what we're fighting to keep. That includes: no street lights; no sidewalks; no concrete streets wall to wall, with sidewalks in the residential area. We don't have house deliveries; we want to go to the post office for our mail. This is the residential village look.

A CARMEL RESIDENT for 55 years, Dorothea Roberts has served on the Carmel Planning Commission for 12 years, and is now in her second term as chairman. A graduate of Carmel's Sunset School and Hartnell College, she is a painter and operates an art gallery in Carmel. She is a member of the Carmel Art Association and the Society for Western Art. She has had her work exhibited at the De Young Museum and a portrait painted by Mrs. Roberts is on exhibit at the University of the Pacific. She has been married to Ken Roberts for 36 years; they have three children and one grandchild. Mrs. Roberts has also been active in P.T.A., Cub Scouting and the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross.

From your vantage point of being on the Planning Commission for so many years and being involved in the enactment of some of the very restrictive laws that we have, do you think there's any danger that some big retail chain might come in and buy up a whole city block in Carmel and build a big department store with lots of parking and so on? Do you think that's even a remote possibility?

It's not possible. There isn't a shop in town that can be built over 80 feet long today. It can't be the size that a shopping center needs. We have forced out -- even a Safeway wouldn't come in here; even a Purity Market couldn't stay. We forced them out with size and bulk and the density of an operation.

Someone could come in and take a big lot and build individual bungalows, but is that so bad if it's done under the guidance of the Design Review Board of the Planning Commission?

You've been criticized for being a member of the Planning Commission which approved the Carmel Plaza. Some people think Carmel Plaza is a little big for Carmel, out of keeping with the character and the charm of the commercial district. How do you respond to your critics when they say that you were one of the people who voted in favor of Carmel Plaza?

I welcome the question because I couldn't find a location for my own shop. I'm in the Plaza myself. I find it very pleasant to have my shop there. As far as the size and bulk are concerned we've written ordinances that would prevent the Plaza from being rebuilt in its present state.

Down the sides of the Carmel Plaza, every 80 feet there's a break in the wall; there are walkways; we've broken the roofline; we broke the outside. The Planning Commission, through the Design Review Committee which I was on, made them change from brick to stucco and boards so that it's all built individually.

On the inside, which is their own property, they were able to connect a walkway, which is their balcony, through it. There was no way we could stop it. But Carmelites should understand that if each one of us owned a 40-by-100 lot there, we couldn't afford to build unless we allowed for eight to 10 shops on each 40-by-100-foot lot. So therefore we'd have twice to three times the shops in there. We would have had no greenbelt, no open space, no gardens except what was required at the time, which was very little.

On the inside, they were able to dig down and get this three-story look. But today they couldn't ever do that. It's all protected with our ordinances.

Could the commission have rejected the Carmel Plaza legally at the time that you were on the commission?

No, there was no legal way it could have been stopped. But we went beyond the "legal" way and they met us. In other words, they could have put a lot more building on that site than is there now. But we convinced them that the Carmel way wasn't the way that they wanted to build it.

Why do you think you're qualified to be a councilman? Councilperson?

I feel that right now, more than ever, Carmel needs an updating of the General Plan, and having had the experience on the Planning Commission, I can help. Everyone comes here and says, "Why, what a beautiful little town!" If you stop and analyze it, it's the small, little individual shops, the outside decor, the size of the signs, no two are alike — this is what I feel. In the past 12 months to 18 months, the council has not taken action on anything of importance — and things are slipping away. I think I have the qualifications to get us back on the right track to help Carmel be what it should be.

In addition to bringing the General Plan up to date, what other questions are there that you think need to be addressed?

One of the main questions is the budget. I think we'd better get back to a bare-bones budget and add things that may be needed as they come along.

We must work with our library on providing more parking. The people of Carmel want to keep their library. They've already said they don't want it moved, so if it's going to stay where it is, it needs parking and there's things that we should be tending to there.

The corporation yard is another big issue. The council is now in the throes of working out some kind of an arrangement.

The last 12 years that I've been on the commission we've been asking them to buy property, to pick it up, to use it.

For what purpose?

So that we have a storage place for our own decomposed granite, our own blacktop -- nobody wants it in his yard; nobody wants the big mess when we trim the trees.

They're storing their equipment at the police station, which was never meant to be any part of the corporation yard but that's where they are because it's the only place they have.

We should be buying land, not just leasing land.

Regarding the Flanders property, what do you think the city should do with it and the surrounding area?

When the Flanders property was offered, the Planning Commission made a study. We saw developments coming in there. We knew it was on the market; we said, "Buy it, buy it!"

Finally, after much hassling, a price was set; the city did buy it, but when we said buy it, we also said the estate was to be sold. This was the recommendation after much study from the Planning Commission.

I know the present council wants to keep it. But our recommendation was that the house itself could not be used for anything functional. It would cost too much money. That land is separate from the park.

There are six lots up there with it. Maybe we don't have to sell all six, but that was the idea when we bought it. There's money enough that would be returned into the city that would do something for somebody -- or buy parking lots.

What do you think the city ought to do with the house? Tear it down?

No, I don't think so. I think if somebody could do something with it - if someone wants to spend the money on it - I think he should have it. But as far as a civic function -- you can't get to it unless you go out of the city limits and swing back around -- I think it should be sold. But I would ask the people, still.

Put it in the form of a referendum to the people?

That's right. We did have a town meeting on it, and the consensus was that it probably should be sold.

One of the people running for reelection on the council wanted to put the police station up there. How ridiculous! To take the police that we need in our city limits of town and put them out of the city limits!

Regarding the proposed recreational facility at Sunset Center, are you in favor of it?

No, definitely not. I did some research on it and after

Carmel split over elected mayor

NO CARMEL mayor has ever been elected by the voters. On Tuesday, Carmel voters will decide if future mayors will continue to be appointed by the five-member City Council or will be elected at the polls.

If the measure passes, it takes effect in 1980.

Voters also will be asked if an elected mayor should have a two-year or four-year term.

In 1959, the State Legislature passed a bill that allows voters in general law cities to opt for direct mayoral elections, rather than the selection by City Council appointment. Carmel is a general law city. Since that time, 45 California cities have chosen direct election.

The issue was approved as a ballot question by the City Council in April 1976. The vote was 4-1. Former Mayor Eugene Hammond, present Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen David Hughes and Mike Brown approved of putting the question to a vote. Councilman Bernard Anderson was the lone dissenter.

PASSAGE OF the measure would cause no change in the powers of the mayor, according to an impartial analysis of the ballot measure, presented by City Attorney George W. Brehmer.

"Regardless of how elected, the mayor is a member of the City Council and has all of the powers and duties of a member of the City Council," the analysis said.

Supporters of the measure claim electing the mayor directly will spur interest in the office and more closely follow democratic principles. Opponents argue that it will eliminate potentially good City Council candidates. Defeated mayoral candidates would not be eligible to serve on the City Council.

Mayoral election issue also faces Marina voters

No written arguments for or against the direct election of a mayor in Carmel were filed. However, in Marina a similar question is on the ballot. Here are arguments, for and against, presented in Marina:

ARGUMENT IN FAVOR

• A directly elected mayor would represent the expressed opinion of all the voters, not just the preferences which emerge from the negotiations among council members. As ceremonial head and spokesman for the city, it is appropriate that the mayor be chosen directly by the voters, rather than by any compromise procedure demanded by the interplay of the personalities on the council.

• An independently elected mayor can help prevent cliquish politics from dominating the city.

• There is an advantage to the continuity provided by a mayor elected to a two- or four-year term, which can contribute to the smooth running of the city.

• There is a need for stronger political leadership in our cities which can be developed by a directly elected mayor. Though the mayor would by law have no greater powers, being directly elected would add prestige and recognition to the position.

• Directly electing a mayor will increase interest in this office on the part of responsible citizens, with the possible result that a well-qualified person who would not stand for election to the City Council may stand for election to the position of mayor.

ARGUMENT AGAINST

• Direct election often causes dissension and bickering between the mayor and council members.

• Separate elections could result in the mayor's being elected but receiving fewer votes than council members, thus defeating the will of the people.

• Tradition allows the top vote-getter in election of council members to be selected by the council as the mayor.

• A waste of good manpower could result when two or more persons file for election as mayor but, of course, only one being elected, the defeated person is unavailable as a council member.

• An independently elected mayor can too easily be controlled by special interests. Five members of council can more easily avoid this.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Mike Brown and Helen Arnold support direct election. Councilmen David Hughes and Bernard Anderson are opposed to direct mayoral election. Three City Council candidates, Dr. Francis Herrick, Howard Brunn and Dorothea Roberts have voiced opposition to the proposal.

The cities of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Seaside all elect their mayors by a public vote. Marina appoints its mayor, but like Carmel, it has the issue on Tuesday's ballot.

Under the existing law, the mayor can be removed by a majority vote of the City Council. The City Counil may then choose another council member as mayor, according to the city attorney's analysis. An elected mayor, however, could be removed from office only by a recall election, it said.

IN MAY 1977, Hughes called for a City Council vote on the removal of Norberg from the position of mayor. Hughes claimed Norberg "misused" his appointive powers by "stacking" the Planning Commission. Hughes recommended the reinstatement of Councilman Barnard Anderson as mayor. The motion was tabled on a 3-2 vote, with Norberg, Brown and Arnold in the majority.

"Since I was first elected to the council in 1958, I've been trying to get this issue on the ballot," said Norberg.

Norberg recalls in the 1972 city elections, he received the highest number of votes, but was not selected as mayor. Bernard Anderson was selected mayor on a unanimous City Council vote.

"When the City Council selects a mayor, some part of the community will be unhappy," Norberg said.

HERE IS what other City Council members and candidates have said about direct mayoral election:

Howard Brunn: "I don't think it's very important one way or the other. But the present system is adequate. I think the City Council has enough good sense to pick its own mayor."

Dr. Francis Herrick: "I intend to vote no. Since the mayor is the only presiding officer at the City Council meetings, it is important the council selects its own chairman."

Dorothea Roberts: "I'm against direct election. If the two most qualified candidates ran for mayor, the City Council would be deprived of the services of the loser."

Helen Arnold: "I'm generally in favor of direct election. Perhaps qualified losers of the mayoral race could serve in some other city post after the election."

Mike Brown: "After four years on the City Council, I've learned that any time you can put something before the voters, then put it before them. Let the residents choose their own mayor. The argument that the council should pick its own mayor does not work. It is usually three people who select the mayor, leaving two unhappy souls."

David Hughes: "The council should do the selecting. If three qualified people run for mayor, the two losers would go nowhere. There is a scarcity of good people running for City Council, and we need to see all the talent we have."

Bernard Anderson: "The council should select. Right now the mayor is selected by the City Council which represents a majority of public opinion. Remember, a majority of people elect the council."

Dorothea Roberts interview

talking to Dan Yurkovich who runs the adult school -- he said they have adults swimming up there from 6 to 7 all summer long. I was there swimming and there weren't a dozen adults from Carmel who used it.

I've heard since that it wasn't advertised enough, but I would question that. But to heat the pool alone, Yurkovich told me, would cost $12,000 a year.

Salinas has a beautiful municipal pool; they have a growing population of over 70,000 and their pool is drained three months.

So it's hard to compare a population of less than 5,000 with this kind of expenditure.

Do you think it would be feasible to eliminate the property tax in Carmel?

I don't think so. The property tax only pays 10 per cent of the cost of running this city. The property owners should be very happy. Their property tax is high but it's less than anyplace else anywhere. It should be lower. We don't have to pay for some of the things the other cities are paying for.

One of the questions that recently came before the City Council was an ordinance that would allow the rezoning of property in Carmel to a new R-4 designation. Over the objections of two members of the council and many people who spoke from the audience, the first reading was adopted. Do you feel there are substantial defects in the ordinance as it was drafted and that it really is necessary that the Planning Commission once again discuss and refine it, or do you think it's proper for the City Council to do this?

I think it's very improper for the City Council to do it. We had public hearings on them and the City Council absolutely disregarded the comments from the audience and the Planning Commission.

This is one of the reasons I had to vote against it. I think it's very definitely a "railroaded" thing, too, and I haven't yet figured out why.

Could you give us one specific instance of a serious defect in the ordinance that needs to be corrected and that would be the proper business of the Planning Commission?

The most serious problem with the whole ordinance is that when we zoned Carmel C-1-L and C-1-S, we put sections of the town into categories. We were hoping that we could keep the plumber, the electrician, and this type of category in Carmel. The rents were climbing then but it's proved that it didn't really keep them because Hudelson & Myers moved out of town; the only thing that's left up there is the lumber yard, but we are hoping to keep this.

This is one of the things I've tried to stress to my Planning Commission, but they're all new members; they didn't want to listen. If they want to say that they could not have tourist-oriented shops there, it would have been much simpler to leave that zone alone and eliminate it.

They're saying they've written the new ordinance and made a new zone so they could encourage more apartments. Let me tell you apartments have always been encouraged in any part of Carmel in the business district. There has never been any place where they weren't welcome.

Letters of endorsement

Dear Editor:

The citizens of Carmel have the opportunity to elect Howard Brunn to the City Council. In our opinion, he has the right feelings and the right approaches to the direction Carmel should take and we urge the voters to take advantage of his energy and love for their town.

Dear Editor:

The candidacies of Francis Herrick and Dorothea Roberts for election to the Carmel City Council on March 7 present an opportunity to change the atmosphere of crisis, confrontation and procrastination that has dominated City Council proceedings for the past year and a half. They both have ties to the city stretching back over decades and both have demonstrated in their past public service their concern for and devotion to the well-being of the whole community, not just a narrow segment.

Dr. Herrick's unsurpassed quiet good judgment and Mrs. Roberts's enormous experience in planning matters and understanding of our excellent zoning ordinance make them our unequivocal choice for election to the City Council.

Dear Editor:

There's nothing wrong with Old Carmel's slogan, "This is your town—start running it." Many who live outside Carmel's city limits wish they had a voice in the city government.

In the past, councils have been dominated by members unresponsive to residents and unable or unwilling to find solutions to the problem of increasing people, cars and the mounting services they require. The present council has tackled problems that other councils have given up on.

It has taken hard study and the courage to risk failure for the council to say "Let's try this."

It is heartening to attend council meetings and see Mike Brown come up with something innovative, practical and usually successful. The many hours that Helen Arnold spends studying each item show in her carefully considered decisions.

Keep Mike Brown and Helen Arnold on the City Council and you'll have unincorporated areas begging for admittance, like it or not. Vote, you lucky Carmelites.

Dear Editor:

It is unfortunate that the Carmel City Council election is set up in such a way that we have to face what amounts to two different slates — one for the four-year terms and one for the two-year term.

There is no problem in choosing the "pro-residents" candidates for the four-year terms, but the choice between Francis Herrick and incumbent Helen Arnold for the two-year term is difficult and unfair.

Herrick, remembered as a long-time president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, runs as a much respected head of a much respected group dedicated in principle to the preservation of Carmel as the village it started out being. Arnold has proven herself as a genuine believer and doer in that same philosophy. Now Mr. Herrick is supported by the group more concerned with development.

Dear Editor:

Helen Arnold represents the "new look" in the Carmel City Council. Through the efforts of Helen, together with Mike Brown and the mayor, the council has enough votes at long last to attempt to stem the tide of the over-commercialization which had gone on previously.

Prior to the entrance of Helen Arnold on the council, the rampant growth approved by the Planning Commission resulted in the doubling of the number of shops overnight in this cherished little village. This gave rise to a serious traffic problem, a parking crisis and air pollution from the auto exhaust of the constant stream of traffic.

Helen Arnold is sensitive to the needs of the people who reside in Carmel. She believes in a balanced, environmentally sound growth policy. Helen Arnold needs to be retained in the decision-making of the city of Carmel so that some of its pressing urban problems can be worked out.

Dear Editor:

I would like to take a few moments of your time to talk about my old friend, Howard Brunn, who is running for City Council of Carmel in the upcoming election to be held on March 7.

I have known Howard since I first came to Carmel in 1927, however being a few years younger, his older brother Homer was my closer friend.

I left Carmel in 1934 and didn't return until after the war in 1946. Howard returned a few years later in 1950. Since that time, I have watched Howard grow in stature along with the community. During these years, he has become a very successful businessman, but never at the expense of Carmel, as so many have done, but on the contrary he seemed always to have the community's best interest at heart. Witness how he led the fight of OLAF in saving the artichoke fields.

As an artist, I feel that what Carmel is today is due primarily to the fact that it started out as an artists' residential community and has been guided these many years by farsighted city councilmen who have fought to preserve this image.

The fact that Howard has grown up with Carmel, from the time it was a sleepy little "artists' colony" whose center of community activity was the Forest Theater to what it is today, combined with his keen business sense, will make him an ideal councilman. I am certain that he will work fairly for residents, artists and businessmen alike. I hope that you will give him your vote on March 7.

Dear Editor:

As a member of a dying breed — an old, original Carmelite, having been born there in 1910 in a cabin located at Ninth and Camino Real which is still standing and being used as a studio — I would like to say a couple of words about a candidate for a two-year term on the Carmel City Council.

Francis Herrick is first and foremost not a politician. He is one who is capable of looking at the problems that confront Carmel and coming up with an answer to those problems that will best suit Carmel. He is not looking for angles that will best suit him or a small group of individuals, from a commercial standpoint for the betterment of their business at the sacrifice of what is best for the most.

Francis Herrick is not a newcomer to Carmel, although it is true that he did not move there to live until his retirement from Mills College.

He has been able to keep abreast of the changes in the community and to be thoroughly familiar with the present needs through his activity as a representative of the Carmel Citizens Committee at City Council meetings for the past four years.

I would also like to take this opportunity to extend my best regards to any of my old friends who might still be in Carmel. I enjoy receiving the Pine Cone and keeping myself abreast of the changes that have been taking place. I hope that I may be able to revisit Carmel in the not too distant future.

Lt. Col. (Ret.) William G. White
Richlands, N.C.

Dear Editor:

It is time for the citizens of Carmel to decide who they would have serve them on City Council.

Old Carmel is working very hard to elect three people to office: Helen Arnold, Mike Brown and Howard Brunn. Through their actions, they have proven themselves to be totally committed to the wishes of their constituency, the residents of Carmel. Mike Brown, during the past four years that he has been on the council, has introduced 55 pieces of legislation aimed at helping the residential community. He will always be remembered as "the councilman who stood up to those who would allow the tour buses to take over our town." The buses must now park at The Plaza and are not allowed in town, or in the residential areas.

Helen Arnold is a true conservationist and, as the only woman on the council, has brought her special insight to the many development problems facing Carmel. Although she has been on the council only two years, she has listened to her constituency and acted on its wishes to save the Flanders-Doolittle Park from development which would bring in more cars and reduce the enjoyment of those of us who would prefer to walk in the park and listen to the sounds of nature instead of cars.

Howard Brunn was one of the founding members of OLAF, the organization which formed to save the Odello Fields from crass development. He was again one of the founding members of Old Carmel, which was started originally to save the Village Corner. He has been involved with both the Youth and the Elderly and will bring fresh ideas and leadership ability to our City Council.

And who is this group called Old Carmel who supports these three candidates? Again, their actions speak well for them. Formed less than two years ago, over 700 members have been involved in many civic projects: We did indeed bring pressure to save the Village Corner. Our members hosted the first annual Tennis Tournament with all proceeds going to a fund to establish a residential care center here in Carmel for our senior citizens. We hosted the annual Pumpkin Carving Contest that the Carmel Business Association no longer wanted to be involved with. We also hosted the annual Sand Castle Contest with no media publicity so that it would once again be a "community day" instead of bringing hordes of tourists. We sang Christmas carols all over town to bring the joy of the season to our residents. We went out door to door to urge people to register to vote and to speak with them personally about their views.

Who makes up this group? We're a diverse group; young and old, employed and retired, all hard workers and committed people who are residents of Carmel. We are currently planning our strategies to fight the people who would allow the huge Marriott complex to move in at our doorstep and further increase the traffic congestion and mobs that fill our streets on the weekends.

Please join us in electing Helen Arnold, Mike Brown and Howard Brunn to office. They need your votes and support!

Dear Editor:

It is nice to see a truly qualified candidate running for the Carmel City Council. A man who has attended City Council meetings religiously for years as an observer for the Carmel Citizens Committee.

One who has no "conflict of interests" as a business owner — yet realizes the necessary part the business carries in our tax base.

One who has the time to be a full-time councilman and who has demonstrated his ability to approach issues with a calm manner.

We urge concerned Carmel citizens to vote for Dr. Francis Herrick. The residents' choice for the Carmel City Council.

Jean and Ken White
Carmel

Dear Editor:

Aside from the campaign rhetoric flying thick and fast in the Carmel City Council election, there are irrefutable facts seen with one's own eyes. Traditional visitors to the village are often the first to point them out: a proliferation of embarrasingly tacky shops in the business district, with a comparable decrease in quality merchandise businesses; and the building of grossly oversized houses in the residential area. Houses at Seventh and San Antonio and on Casanova between Eighth and Ninth (possibly illegal) are cases in point. Residents of the village have felt impotent to do anything because the political apathy among the voting population is notorious.

There are candidates who address themselves to these issues. They are only recently in the majority and their voting records are unassailable in protective legislation for the village. They are Helen Arnold and Michael Brown. They don't just talk about the problem, they have done something about it and will continue to, if given the chance. My vote goes to them on March 7.

Dear Editor:

I am delighted to see that Howard Brunn is one of the candidates for the Carmel City Council. He is a dedicated citizen of this community, knows Carmel and understands our city's problems. I recall the great effort he made when he served on the board of OLAF in helping to bring about the successful purchase of the Odello West.

Howard would make an excellent member of our City Council.

Frederick S. Farr
Carmel

Dear Editor:

After standing alone on the Council all those years against an ever burgeoning, upward, sideways and pricewise, business district whose art galleries, liquor outlet eating places and chain stores flourished at the expense of small, intimate book shops, hardware shops, meat markets and fruit stores, it must have been comfort to Gunnar Norberg to find a young man, Mike Brown, elected to the council whose views were similar to his.

Then to find himself in the position, due to the resignation of the previous mayor, of appointing a woman, Helen Arnold, with a similar philosophy must have been heady indeed.

Unfortunately, the previous vice-mayor was not about to let go gracefully the purple robes of the mayoralty snatched so suddenly from his grasp.

Perhaps the most important piece of legislation of Norberg's term is coming up for second reading next council meeting: to limit the size of new buildings to 8,000 square feet and the uses of buildings along Junipero, between Third and Sixth, to those useful to the resident of Carmel.

Can one really blame them for not wanting to return it to the Planning Commission, where it might languish indefinitely — a Planning Commission, most recent of a long list which has given us such outsize architectural monstrosities as the Carmel Plaza, the Mission Apartments and the Carmel Chambers Condominiums.

These ugly buildings have no place in the village of Carmel.

Better looking architecturally speaking, but way over size and out of proportion to a town which calls itself a village, we have the Jade Tree, the Horizon Inn and the Adobe Inn.

Which way do we want our village to go?

Margot Hyatt
Carmel

Dear Editor:

It seems more than passing strange — indeed, startling — to find a Pine Cone editorial complaining: "Steamrollered by Gunnar's majority."

If anyone has painful memories of long being "steamrollered" by a majority, or various majorities, it is our mayor himself.

Over the years, when his was the lone voice crying in the wilderness against the developmental erosion of the residential character of our Carmel, he experienced majorities — majorities that allowed development alien to the beautiful village we knew, majorities that sanctioned what seems a heart transplant from Los Angeles, with due apologies to that metropolis.

Now that there is a majority that believes in Carmel, let us implement and strengthen it. Let us applaud the first action in many years toward a reassertion of Carmel's image as a residential community, and take with a large grain of salt the protest of attorneys for commercial property owners. Let us be something less than worried that the wording of an ordinance might not be satisfactory to them.

Let us reject past planning activity that has already done us enough damage. Let us assure a majority in favor of Carmel's essential flavor by re-electing incumbents Helen Arnold and Mike Brown, both of whom, by their actions, make their primary concerns crystal clear.

And let us give that majority additional strength by electing Howard Brunn to the council. This is a man steeped in Carmel tradition and a successful businessman to boot. It is indeed unusual to find this combination of characteristics. Insight and vision such as he can supply are hard to come by — the opportunity to elect him should not be taken lightly.

Keep it in mind for election day — Arnold, Brown and Brunn, to maintain our Carmel.

Community Hospital praised by medical accreditation team

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and its medical staff were commended in February for "continuing excellence of patient care" as the hospital won a new two-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

In a letter to hospital administrator Thomas E. Tonkin, John E. Milton, deputy director of the hospital accreditation program, said, "The joint Commission and the California Medical Association wish to commend you for maintaining standards deserving of accreditation and for your constant effort to improve the quality of patient care rendered in your hospital."

William F. Borland, chairman of the hospital board of trustees, lauded the work of the 180 physicians and the 665 hospital staff members.

The 172-bed hospital was inspected by an accreditation team made up of representatives of the joint commission, the California Medical Association and the State Department of Health.

The two-year accreditation is the maximum given by the joint commission.

While the joint commission accreditation is not mandatory, the nonprofit, nongovernmental organization review is used to seek funding and by insurance companies as a condition for reimbursing hospital claims.

PROSPERITY AND THE LITTLE VILLAGE: EDITORIAL

After a rather dull winter, business has begun picking up in Carmel. We hear on every hand the self-congratulatory tones of this returning prosperity. Everyone in and out of business feels brighter because things are on the upgrade, money is getting easier and the town is filling up.

Carmel is growing. Carmel is growing.

We don't like that, but there is no turning back. And we do not honestly want to turn back. We desire the prosperity that comes with growth, but let us seek to direct it. Let us plan to have the right kind of residents for our newcomers; to have reasonable restrictions upon their building operations, and upon what they might unwisely do to destroy our beauties. Let us city plan for them. And unless we have something better to substitute, let us not tear plans to bits and cast them aside.

WHY THIS APATHY? EDITORIAL

If there is any place on the globe where the ballot has an actual and positive value, it is in Carmel. Here the elective officers can not only ruin the joy of living in this town, but can slap a special assessment upon your property for something you do not want at all and practically destroy its value to you.

It would seem the right to vote would be eagerly embraced in Carmel. Yet with nine days to go before the elections, less than half of Carmel's eligible voters are registered.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWSPAPER DISCUSSES THE PILL

The Carmel High School newspaper gave some parents the "shock treatment" by headlining a story "Teenage Girls and the Pill."

The article, written by cheerleader Connie Hood, included quotes from two Peninsula doctors, explanations on how contraceptive pills affect the menstrual cycle and instructions for administering them.

As a result of the story, the newspaper's advisor, Wally LaValley, is now required to submit to a board of publications any article he deems controversial.

Marianist priest scheduled to speak at Carmel Mission

Carmel Mission

Marianist Father Robert Hughes will discuss "Gospel Prayer" next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Carmel Mission Basilica. Father Hughes, who is associated with the Marianist provincial residence and the Ave Maria Book Center in San Jose, is the fourth speaker in a series of five scheduled at the combined parish Lenten program. This talk is sponsored by the Diocese of Monterey Office of Education.

The newly formed Parish Prayer Group meets each Monday at the Junipero Serra School library. For more information, phone 624-1271.

Community

The Women's Association of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula will meet on Monday at 1 p.m. in the Woodhull Fellowship Hall at the church. The speaker will be Dr. David Borucki, who will give a presentation entitled, "Blood Donation — Why?"

"The Long Way Home" is the title of the Rev. Howard Bull's sermon to be given Sunday at the 10:30 a.m. worship service.

The Rev. Nicholas Bosworth will deliver the youth sermonette titled "Bless the Lord" during the service.

Wayfarer

Dr. Ronald Menmuir, former instructor in philosophy at Monterey Peninsula College, is leading an eight-week course in conjunction with the Lenten study series on Sundays at 9:30 a.m. The Bible study series is entitled "Why Religious Faith Survives the Crisis of Belief."

"In the Desert of the Heart" is the Rev. Charles Anker's sermon topic for Sunday. Worship services are conducted at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Presbyterian

"Why Do People Go Away from Jesus?" is the topic for the Rev. Deane Hendrick's sermon to be delivered Sunday at the 8:30, 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

Christian Science

"Man" is the topic of the Sunday lesson-sermon. Services are conducted at 11 a.m. and at 5 p.m. The Sunday school, for young people up to age 21, begins at 11 a.m.

Testimonials of healing through Christian Science are delivered every Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

THE REV. CHARLES Anker of the Church of the Wayfarer hands Steven Abell II, of Carmel, the Boy Scout patch for the "God and Family" award. A member of Pack 48, young Steven followed a six-month course of study aimed at personal, family and religious growth to earn the award. It was presented by the Rev. Anker at a service on Sunday. Steve is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Abell, of Carmel. Scouts who assisted at the service included Carl Still, of Troop 3; John Bradley, of Troop 127; and Clifton Bonner and Greg Harrison, both of Pack 48.

Obituaries

Artist Elber is cremated

Carmel artist Jonathan Michael Elber, 35, was cremated in private services this week after he committed suicide in his home on Feb. 24.

Elber, a lifelong Monterey County resident, was found by his son in the kitchen of his family home. According to the county coroner's office, Elber cut his throat with a butcher knife and bled to death.

Elber worked in batiks.

Survivors include his widow, Mary Elber, of Carmel; son Nathaniel Graham Elber of Carmel; mother Sarah Reamer Elber of Carmel; sister Catherine Elber of Carmel; and brothers Daniel Bain Elber of Carmel and David Sean Elber of Hawaii.

The private services were conducted at the Little Chapel by the Sea. Arrangements were made by Paul Mortuary.

Retired rancher dead at 73

Richard H. Westphal, a retired rancher who lived in Carmel, died Monday, Feb. 20. He was 73.

A Monterey Peninsula resident for 53 years, he died at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a long illness.

Private services were conducted by Mission Mortuary with inurnment scheduled at Cypress Lawn Cemetery in Colma.

Westphal is survived by his widow, Glenell M. Westphal, and a son, Richard H. Westphal, both from Carmel.

Mrs. Hitchcock succumbs

Hazel V. Hitchcock of Carmel Valley, a resident of the Peninsula for 50 years, died Feb. 21 in Carmel Convalescent Hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. Hitchcock, 88, was the widow of Joseph L. Hitchcock, a cattleman and harness maker known as the "Sage of Carmel Valley." He died in 1969.

Mrs. Hitchcock was a member of the First Assembly of God Church in Pacific Grove. She lived on Paso Hondo in the Valley.

Survivors include sons Lytton J. Hitchcock of Carmel Valley and Vernon P. Hitchcock of Anchorage, Alaska; daughter Clara J. Hakola of Antioch; nine grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at Farlinger Funeral Home in Monterey with the Rev. Richard Malvoney of the First Assembly of God Church officiating. Burial was in Modesto City Cemetery.

Longtime resident dies

Helen Thompson Berkey, a Peninsula resident since 1944, died on Thursday, Feb. 23, after a brief illness. She was 81.

She was the widow of Charles L. Berkey, who died in 1948.

Burial was at Carmelo Cemetery. Private services were conducted Monday at the Little Chapel by the Sea. The Rev. David Hill of All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel officiated.

She is survived by one brother, Ralph W. Thompson Sr., of Pacific Grove, and five nieces and nephews, including Ralph W. Thompson Jr. and Milton W. Thompson, both of Carmel.

Mrs. Johnson dead at 86

Ida Hale Livingston Johnson, 86, succumbed to a lengthy illness Wednesday, Feb. 22, in the medical unit at Carmel Valley Manor.

A memorial service was conducted Saturday in Paso Robles at the Plymouth Congregational Church.

She was a member of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula and the American Association of University Women.

She is survived by her husband, Halbert Johnson, of Carmel Valley; a daughter, Eugenia L. Snyder, of Paso Robles; three sons, Robert P. Livingston, of Fair Oaks; William H. Livingston, of Fresno; and Lennard L. Livingston, of Yuba City.

Farrell's touch

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

On this evening of the 19th day of February 1978, we have gathered here to break bread as we honor Sergeant Walter "Pappy" Boyle as he wanders off to a well-earned retirement after having served Carmel faithfully for 20 years, six months, 19 days and three hours to date.

We know, O Lord, that all just authority comes from You and Your law and order.

Thirty years ago, you called upon Sgt. Boyle to serve mankind — not as a job, but as a vocation to help preserve order, to assist his neighbor in need, to protect the weak and apprehend the delinquent.

Each year, the difficulty and burden of protecting society increases. Laws become more complicated and appear to favor the criminal and imperil law enforcement.

Every time Sgt. Boyle reported for duty, he laid his life on the line for each of us. Greater love than this no man hath than to lay down his life for his friends.

His service has been dedicated, honorable, honest and tempered with understanding and sympathy. He has won esteem in Your eyes and in ours as well. Grant him continued health in mind and body and give us all the grace and wisdom to follow his example.

(Editor's note: Father Farrell delivered this invocation at the retirement dinner for Carmel Police Sgt. Walter Boyle.)

Carmel High tennis squad opens season in Palo Alto

THE CARMEL High School boys' varsity tennis team opens its 1978 Mission Trail Athletic League (MTAL) season Friday at Gunn High School in Palo Alto. The Padres will be defending their 1977 MTAL championship.

Four varsity players are returning from last year's team, which took first place in Central Coast Section (CCS) regional play. The team took a second in CCS finals under Coach David Chaney.

The tennis Padres' first home match is scheduled on Tuesday, March 14, against Salinas High School.

The schedule for the season is:

March 10, at Santa Cruz; March 11, Pacific Grove Tournament; March 13, at Leland High School in San Jose; March 14, Salinas at Carmel.

March 21, Los Altos at Carmel Valley Racquet Club; March 23, Monterey at Carmel; April 5, Palma at Carmel; April 7, Carmel at Gonzales.

April 12, Stevenson at Carmel; April 14, Carmel at Pacific Grove; April 19, Hollister at Carmel; April 21, Carmel at Palma High School in Salinas.

April 26, Gonzales at Carmel; April 28, Carmel at Stevenson; April 29, MTAL Singles and Doubles at Stevenson; May 3, Pacific Grove at Carmel.

May 5, Carmel at Hollister; May 6, CCS Doubles and Singles; May 16, CCS Regionals; May 18, CCS Regionals; May 23, CCS Finals; May 25, CCS Finals.

Al Giordano has high game in American Legion bowling

Carmel American Legion Post 512 took a first place in tournament bowling in January, rolling a combined 3,043 in the legion district monthly series. In February, the five-man team combined for a 2,762 score.

The February tournament at Cypress Bowl in Monterey included a three-game series total of 492, rolled by Rod Sams (157-171-164). Other total scores were: Jim Myron, 468 (156-165-147); Jerry Evans, 467 (159-166-142); Pat O'Malley, 463 (157-174-132); and Al Giordano, 434 (134-175-125).

Giordano rolled the team's high game at 175. The next tournament will be March 19 at Monterey Lanes.

TWO AT $149,500

These houses could hardly be less alike, yet each has a special charm of its own.

Intimate House in Pebble Beach

It stands at the end of Pine Meadow Way in Sunridge Pines, No. 4118, a private and remarkably personal house. The exterior is vertical cedar boards, naturally weathered to a sea-grey sheen. Three tall windows add height to the front and surmount the bridgeway entrance.

The same windows light the 16'x24' living room, and open beams flow down from front to back where a flying deck reaches toward the canyon. Tall, gaunt Monterey pines and a broad, permanent green belt protect the silent privacy of the setting.

Except for parquet flooring at the entrance and in the kitchen, the house is carpeted in cinnamon brown, contrasting with white walls and natural cedar trim. An eight-foot partition screens the kitchen, and a row of birch cabinets provides abundant room for dishes, wines, etc.

Two flights of stairs lead down to the sleeping and work areas. These include the 11'6"x16' master bedroom with its own deck and bath. A second bath is off the carpeted hall, opposite the second and third bedrooms. The latter is currently serving as a study, a use for which it is superbly suited.

Numerous closets open off the lower corridor, one hiding washer and dryer, another for general storage, still others for linens and such. The house is just three years old, in immaculate condition. The large, two-car garage is separate.

Artist's Home on Carmel Riviera

You can roam this house for hours before you discover its secret. You'll be intrigued by its floors -- narrow, dark-stained boards -- leading from room to room. You'll be warmed by the arched brick fireplace in the living room, warmed again by its duplicate in the master bedroom. You'll be surprised by the Jacuzzi tub in the master bath, enchanted by the ocean views.

Finally you'll say, "What makes this house?" The answer is "Modules." Actually four modules if you count the 20'x20' Genie-doored garage. No. 1 is 24 feet square, with hiproofs rising from all sides, supported by open beams converging on a single upthrust beam at the center. One half is the living room with windows to the sea; the other half, divided by semi-partitions, is dining room and kitchen.

Module No. 2 is the bedroom area. Of similar size and with similar open beam support, this is split equally with a bedroom and bath on each side. Walls are paneled, closets copious, bath memorable.

Module No. 3 is set just off the dining room. It's 12 feet square, paved with red tile, ringed with windows. It's an ideal studio for artist, writer or musician, with well-planned work spaces, wet bar, and deck jutting out toward the trees.

Decks abound. Almost every room has an opening to views of the ocean, the hills, the forest. The lot is not quite a half-acre, a private sanctuary, only five miles south of Carmel and easy to reach. The address: 144 Carmel Riviera Drive.

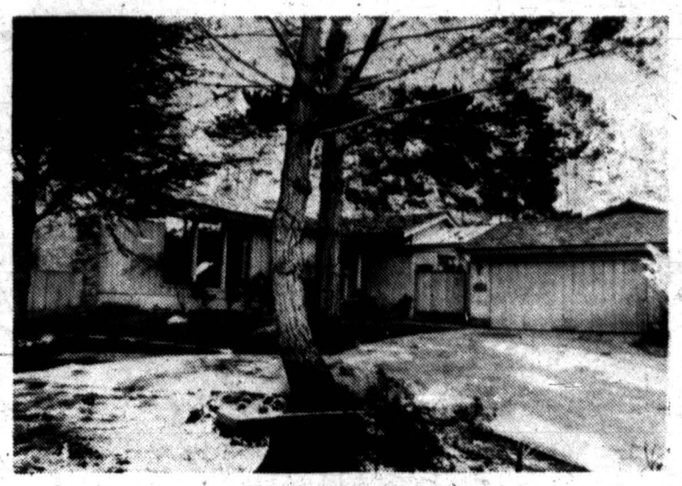
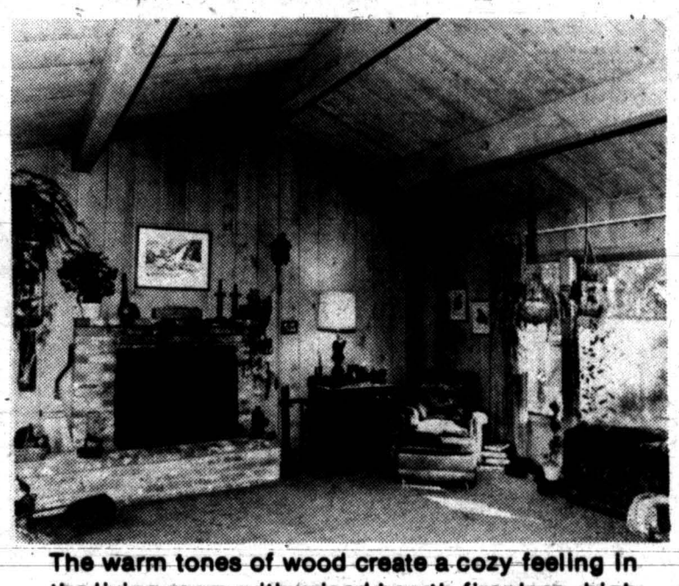
Intriguing Home in the Country Club



In harmony with its woodsy setting is this redwood, shake-roofed, one-story home on a quiet street near Spyglass golf course in the Country Club part of Pebble Beach.



The warm tones of wood create a cozy feeling in the living room with raised hearth fireplace, high beamed ceiling, paneled walls and effective use of glass.

Singularly intriguing is the open plan of the skylighted dining/kitchen arrangement with beamed ceiling, gleaming hardwood floors and convenient passthrough to living room.

Living room, dining/kitchen area and master bedroom have sliding glass doors to this sunny patio, center for outdoor living. Another walled patio opens off one of the other two bedrooms. Completing the living area are tiled entry, two baths and laundry. In addition, there's a double garage. Price, $127,500.

Only big dollars are for saving...

☐ True ☐ False

Children can develop lifetime habits early. And it's never too late for grownups to pick up a good habit or two for themselves along the way. A great habit, at any age, is Passbook Savings.

Passbook Savings help you get the things you want, sooner. And at Monterey Savings, you're never too young to start and never too grown up to profit from it! All accounts earn the highest interest allowed by law, compounded daily, so even "little dollars" get bigger . . . faster.

Your account is insured too, so you save safely while you earn. And Monterey Savings' many free services add even more value to your savings program.

Piggybanks may be a good start to a good habit, but that's where the interest stops . . . literally! So empty that pig, or that sugar bowl and open a Passbook Savings Account at Monterey Savings. At any age, it's a habit that will grow on you!

The Elixir of Love

Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble

HIDDEN VALLEY OPER

What the critics have to say about the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble:

- "Chalk up another resounding and brilliant success for the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble, clearly evidenced by the overflowing house whose enthusiasm and appreciation knew no bounds in their vocal demonstration." Carmel Pine Cone

- "In this reviewer's opinion, there is absolutely no acceptable justification for any opera lover to miss attending the rare assortment of musical delights offered by this extraordinary company." Monterey Peninsula Herald

- "...the company has reached a level of musical excellence and sheer theatrical engrossment that demands the attention of all Bay Area opera-goers." Opera News

- "A fine performance ... eight young singers, vocally gifted and dramatically poised." San Francisco Chronicle

The Elixir of Love

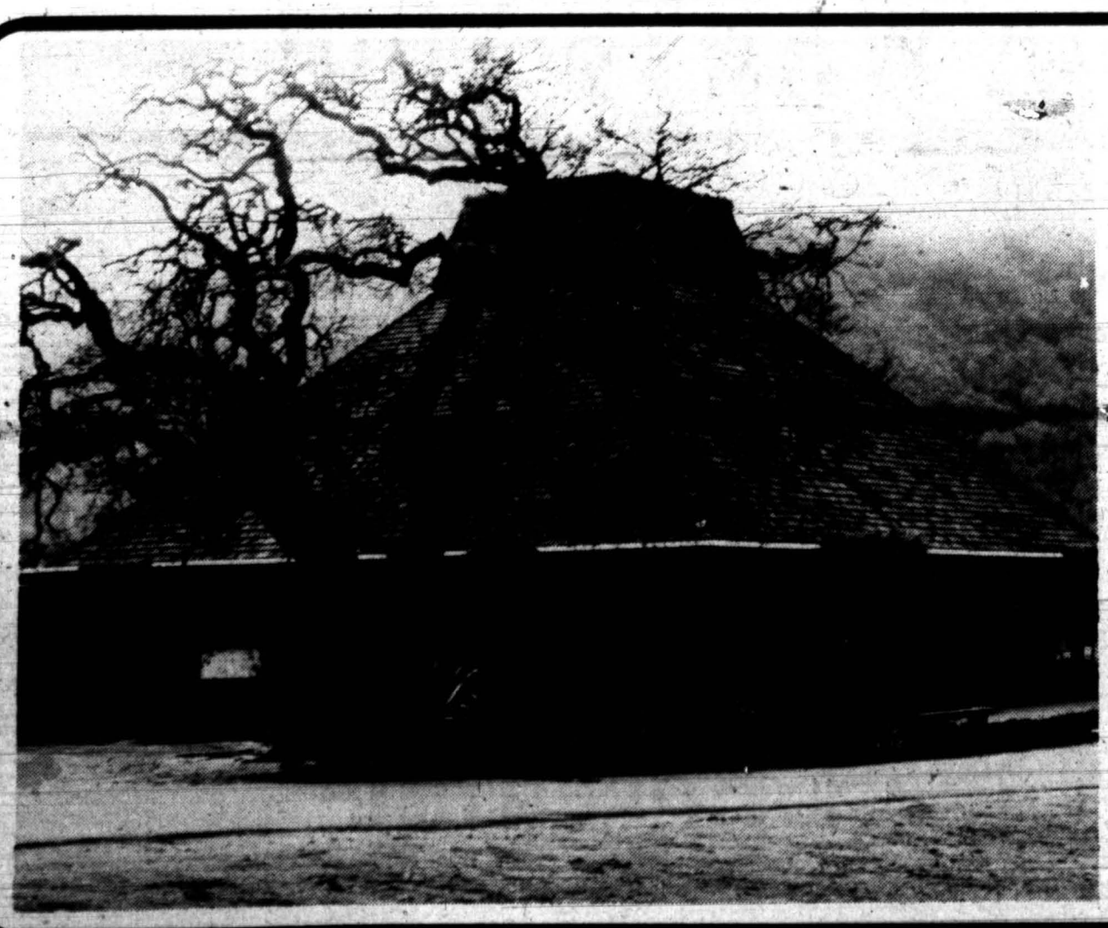
GAETANO DONIZETTI

Conductor John Yaffé Director John Stone Porter Designer Henry Hill

OPENING NIGHT -- MARCH 10th • 8 P.M.

(see back page for all performance dates)

This charming, rollicking comedy is filled with theatrical and musical moments famous as opera "highpoint." Donizetti brings the classical spoof to life and provides a theatre experience of bursting joy.



About the HIDDEN VALLEY OPERA ENSEMBLE

THE SINGERS:

The opera program at Hidden Valley accepts a small group of young singers each year to live on campus and intensively study the art and crafts of opera production. You will find the talent level and effectiveness of these young performers enormously exciting. Gathered through a process of competitive auditions, they represent some of our nation's finest young singers. All members of the Ensemble are in residence at Hidden Valley for seven months of study and performance, designed to prepare them for an opera career.

THE SETTING:

You'll enjoy the Hidden Valley Opera Setting. Nestled in low bordering mountains of Carmel Valley, the dramatic contemporary opera house that seats 300 overlooks natural fields and woodlands. Opera is presented in-the-round, in English, and offers you the rare opportunity of sharing closely and dramatically with the performers.

Be a FRIEND ...

A friend is someone who supports and encourages, and is ready to stand by in time of need. This is what Friends of Hidden Valley is all about.

There is a magic and excitement at this Institute of the Arts which draws to it all people who love music and the theatre. There is also the feeling of commitment to excellence--a feeling which is transmitted to everyone who experiences a performance at Hidden Valley Theatre.

Even if one is unable to take an active part in the fund-raising and fun-generating "Affairs" which the Friends present throughout the year, becoming a member is warm evidence of an interest in the efforts of the Auxiliary. A thousand members would mean $10,000 to provide fellowships for the young singers whose performances thrill us during the Opera Season.

Hidden Valley is growing, and the Friends must grow with it. Won't you join us?
